$25,000 for a Letter. Respect the Cow. Senator Norris' Notion. Hearing Without Sound.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

A LETTER WRITTEN by Thomas Jefferson, describing the drafting of the Declaration of Independence, the New York conspiracy against George Washington and the campaign in Canada, has been sold for $25,000, highest price ever paid for a Thomas Jefferson letter.

It isn't as important to this age, and its raging controversy, as a letter that Jefferson wrote to Yancey, recommending a British brewer to the Assembly of Virginia, and saying:

"I wish to see this beverage (beer) become common, instead of the whisky, which kills one-third of our citizens, and ruins their families."

IT WOULD SURPRISE Jefferson to learn that, with the best of intentions, prohibition has driven out beer, and made whisky, once more, the national drink, killing many citizens.

WHEN YOU SEE a cow, contentedly changing grass into milk, or mournfully mooing for her calf, make a respectful bow. For she, the cow, is "the biggest industry" in the United States.

Talking to the National Cooperative Milk Producers' Federation, Thomas H. McInnerney shows the value of wealth produced by the American cow amounts to $4,000,000,000 a year. It is an industry greater than steel, greater than automobiles, by far.

Mr. McInnerney, who is the president of the National Dairy Products Corporation, selling 100,000,000 pounds of butter a year, and $400,000,000 worth of all milk products, believes that some of the money and labor-saving devices now applied to other industries can be applied to milk production, and proposes to help that along.

It may surprise you to know that the fountain pen in your waistcoat pocket is probably made of milk, all but the metal part.

SENATOR NORRIS thinks our people should do a few things for themselves, threatens to force an extra session, unless fair hearing is given to his ideas.

These include the notion that the people, having spent hundreds of millions on Muscle Shoals, should own that enterprise.

Senator Norris thinks that if the people are good enough to pay for a thing, they are also good enough to own it after they have paid for it.

OTHERS, "more conservative," think the people should pay for a great undertaking and then private individuals should step in, own it and sell power and fertilizer, if any, and sell it to people at the highest price the traffic will bear.

The fact that Canada operates power companies owned by the people, and incidentally sells the power at a profit from Niagara to Canadians for half the price that Americans pay to private companies on our side of the falls, may have some effect in the Norris argument.

VIBRATIONS, producing no sound that the ear perceives, are, nevertheless, "heard" within the human brain.

Sergius P. Grace, vice president of the Bell telephone laboratories, shows the brain can be made to hear what the ears do not hear, the owner of the brain beating time to music produced by electrical vibrations.

That is something to puzzle evolutionists.

WHEN THE LATE J. Pierpont Morgan was in his prime, and Thomas F. Ryan was gathering up New York street car lines with patient perseverance, Mr. Morgan said of Ryan:

"He can be the richest man in the world, if he cares to take the trouble."

T. F. Ryan didn't become the richest man in the world, but did fairly well. The fortune he left now pays, to New York State alone, an inheritance tax of more than $21,000,000.

Mr. Ryan got rich because he had imagination. Also for several other reasons.

He bought diamond mines in Africa, and solved the risk of loss in transit by bringing the diamonds out of Africa in flying machines.

AT LONDON'S round table conference, Hindus and Mohammedans, discussing home rule, that India will not get, applauded loudly at one stage in the talk.

With Maharajahs, Brahmins of highest caste, and others that could not even allow his shadow to fall upon them in India without pollution, there sat one of the untouchables, the lowest class, horribly oppressed, that numbers 43,000,000 in India's population.

AT HOME, this low-class creature could not walk on the same side of the street with those that met him at the round table. His touch would mean contamination for them, and death for him; his breath would be poison.

But they all applauded him in London, because the poor creature said he preferred any kind of rule by the Hindus, to rule by the British. Slaves cling to their slavery.

AVIATRIX OFF ON 2ND CUBA ATTEMPT

Mrs. Miller Starts on First Lap of Flight From Pittsburgh-to-Havana

Mrs. J. M. Keith Miller nosed her ship towards the 1,500-foot ceiling over Butler airport at 10:17 o'clock today and soared southeast for Jacksonville, Fla. After four days' delay she was en route on a projected one-stop flight from Pittsburgh to Cuba.

The Australian flier circled the field once before she headed south. In her plane were 110 gallons of gas, two half-pints of milk and a rubber-balloon raft—supplies she hopes will protect her from the air, hunger and the seas.

WEATHER FAVORABLE

Weather reports this morning north of Virginia were encouraging. Along the coast, Washington wired her, rain and slight mists were showing signs of clearing.

Fogs had driven her back the first morning she attempted the flight, and prevented her from starting on succeeding days.

FRIENDS WATCH START

A small group of friends and air company representatives watched the take-off. John Liggett III, treasurer of the Aerial Enterprises, backing the flight, and his mother, Mrs. John Liggett, Jr., were among the throng.

Mrs. Miller expects her rubber rowboat to protect her in the event any mishap might occur over the Atlantic. She also carries a parachute. She expects to reach Jacksonville by dusk.

Allen Guilty In Slaying of Son-in-Law

After an all-night deliberation, a jury in Criminal Court today found Lee Allen, half-breed Indian, of Curry Hollow, Mifflin Township, guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the slaying of his son-in-law, Daniel McConeghy.

The verdict, reached at 8 a. m. today, was read at the opening of court before Judge George V. Moore. It carries a penalty of from six to 12 years' imprisonment.

SENTENCE PENDING

Sentence will be pronounced when Visiting Judge David W. Henderson, of Fayette County, who presided at the trial, returns here the week of December 15.

CHILDREN KICK BOMB, 1 HURT

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—While a 14-year-old boy lay at the point of death in Northeast Hospital today, city detectives launched the most bizarre manhunt in local history—seeking the man who hid a deadly bomb in a vacant lot and watched school children romp about the field, carelessly kicking the infernal machine to and fro.

William Hay, 14, was hurled to the ground, senseless, battered and burned, when he kicked a "tin can" while playing in the lot. When he regained consciousness hours later he told detectives:

"I don't know what happened. I was walking across the lot when I saw something that looked like a tin can. I kicked it. There was a terrible explosion and then everything went black."

WELFARE FUND $1,020,488

With only four more days to go, workers in the annual Welfare Fund campaign to raise $1,520,248 for relief work in Allegheny County, today redoubled their activities in an effort to put the campaign over the top.

At a luncheon yesterday it was reported that to date $1,020,448 had been collected or pledged.

A. K. Oliver, president of the Fund, today issued a statement aimed to correct misleading reports that large amounts of money are spent by workers, especially in the noon luncheons. He again called attention to the fact the workers pay for their own luncheons, that all workers are volunteers, and that the actual cost of the campaign is but 4.6 per cent of the total amount of the budget, which includes all campaign expenses.

He compared this figure with the 20 to 40 per cent of the total raised under the old system, whereby each agency raised its own funds.

Natalie Moorehead To Wed Director

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov 22.—(AP.)—Natalie Moorehead, Pittsburgh's blonde vamp of the screen, who announced her engagement to Alan Crosland, film director, some time ago, said they plan to marry within two weeks.

Miss Moorehead declares she is a vamp for the cinema only, observing "most men prefer to do the vamping themselves."

FINED, FREED IN NUMBERS CASE

Rothenberg and Beebe Hold Court Evidence Lacking Despite Man's Admissions

Assured by Inspector Albert Beebe that sufficient evidence was lacking to hold a self-confessed Negro "numbers" writer for court, Magistrate Leo Rothenberg today fined Columbus Walker, 32, of Hazelwood, $50.

After assessing the prisoner, Magistrate Rothenberg remarked:

"Well, that let's me out."

CARRIED SLIPS

Walker was arrested Friday in a Clark street poolroom when caught peddling "numbers," detectives say. When arrested, he had sales slips in his pockets. Rothenberg asked Beebe if that was sufficient evidence to hold Walker, and the police head replied that it was not.

Rothenberg declared from the bench that he was against the sale of "numbers" to school children, and when he put the question to Walker, the Negro promptly denied that pupils were among his customers.

FINED FOR HOME BREW

Raided by North Side police on a complaint that he sold "numbers" to school children, Art Quinn, 33, of 33 East Robinson street, denied the charge today in North Side Police Court, and police testified they had no evidence to substantiate the complaint. They did, however, testify they found a quantity of home brew in his store, and Quinn was fined $100 for the offense.

AUTO KILLS GIRL RADIO SINGER

Gertrude Rodgers, 24, of the Bailey apartments, Monongahela, well-known radio singer, died this morning in the Monongahela Hospital a few hours after an automobile, in which she and two companions were riding, overturned on the Finleyville road.

Robert Critchard, a friend, was with Miss Rodgers when the machine overturned. They were returning from New York, where they had taken part in the Atwater Kent competition.

According to police, Critchard was driving the machine, and is believed to have fallen asleep at the wheel. The car crashed to the side of the road and overturned.

Miss Rodgers had appeared over Station WCAE within the past month.

Jack Hoyes, 19, of Belle Vernon winner of the competition, was the other passenger.

Ryan Estate Gains Millions Since Crash

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—(AP.)—The New York Times said today that Clendenin J. Ryan during and after the stock market crash last fall had increased by about $5,000,000 the $121,000,000 estate of his father, Thomas Fortune Ryan.

Ryan, executor of the estate, sold large blocks of securities before the slump, realizing on most at or near their peak. After the crash he disposed of controlling interest in the Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railway more than $3,000,000 higher than the stock's value when his father died.

Dukes Meet Wesleyan Today

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

With Pitt idle, awaiting its final game of the season against its traditional old rival, Penn State, at the Stadium on Thanksgiving Day, next Thursday, and Carnegie Tech playing Temple University in a benefit game for the unemployed at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, the local collegiate football field belongs solely to the Duquesne University Dukes this afternoon.

West Virginia Wesleyan's fighting Bobcats, who overwhelmed the Waynesburg College eleven last Saturday, 31-13, will furnish the opposition, and a close battle is looked for. Forbes Field will be the scene of the conflict, with the kickoff scheduled for 2 o'clock.

FIRST DAYLIGHT GAME

The Dukes, with three defeats in their record, suffered against West Virginia University, North Dakota and Geneva, will be battling to redeem themselves. It will be their first daylight game of the

COLD DROPS MERCURY 30 DEGREES

Balmy Weather Ended Here, But Storm From Midwest Fails to Reach City

Clear, brisk fall weather is in store for this district over the week-end, Forecaster W. S. Brotzman predicted today.

The mercury fell 30 degrees over night from yesterday's high mark of 70, ending the long balmy weather, but no severe cold is in sight for this part of the country, the forecaster said. Blizzard conditions in the Rocky Mountain region mean nothing here, he asserted.

Tonight the mercury will descend to around 35, Brotzman said. Tomorrow likely will be an ideal late autumn day.

With no rain in prospect, this year bids fair to be the driest on record. To date the total rainfall this year has been 20.33 inches, a deficiency of 12.24 inches. The most arid year heretofore recorded was 1900, when 25.73 inches fell.

40 Persons Rescued From Storm-Bound Dakota Hut

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Pre-winter snows still buried some sections of the northwestern plains states today while details were recounted of a storm-drama—the rescue of 40 persons from a storm-bound tar-papered hut in North Dakota.

PLOW EFFECTS RESCUE

Their rescue was effected by the crew of a snow plow which dug a path to the hut, five miles from Mandan, N. D. The hut's occupants had been forced to abandon their automobiles and remain

SUSPECT'S HAT YIELDS GEMS

Like a magician pulling rabbits from a hat, Dormont police piled an assortment of watches, rings, lockets and other jewelry from the hat of Max Grossman, of New York, after they found him in the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Moyer, 2985 Belrose avenue, early this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Moyer identified the loot. Upon returning to their home shortly before midnight they found a light burning in their apartment. Mrs. Moyer was certain there were no lights left burning. Police were called.

Motorcycle Patrolman Adrian Fedor and Night Capt. Casper Hasley captured the suspect as he was leaving the building. At the municipal building, when searched by Chief of Police Ralph B. Miller, the jewelry, valued at several hundred dollars was reported found inside the lining of his hat. He was wearing a wrist watch around his elbow, police say. He denied the thefts.

Mrs. John Watkins, 2730 Broadway avenue, Dormont, also identified the suspect as having fled from her apartment Monday afternoon.

TRAIN PLUNGES TO RIVER, 50 DIE

PARIS, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—Tracks washed out by torrential rains of the past two days plunged the engine and three cars of the Paris-Nantes express train off a bridge into the Loire River 14 miles east of Nantes last night, causing a fatality list estimated as high as 50 persons.

Four bodies were recovered. It was feared few if any of the occupants of the coaches submerged in the swift waters had opportunity to escape. The wreck occurred between the towns of Oudon and Clermont.

A hospital train and ambulances rushed to the scene. The engineer and fireman of the train, trapped at their posts, died with those in the first three coaches. The remainder of the train did not leave the tracks. As far as is known, no Americans were on the train.

Mellons Sail for Delayed Honeymoon in Europe

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Mellon, Jr., of Pittsburgh, sailed for France last night aboard the Ile de France, on their honeymoon.

The young couple boarded the boat Friday afternoon and remained in seclusion up to the time of sailing.

Close friends of the Mellons say they will go first to Paris and then depart on a tour of the Continent. Their stay on the Continent will be of indefinite duration, at the end of which they will return to Pittsburgh, where Mellon will resume his position in a bank.

The Mellons were escorted to the boat by Miss Irene Rowley, of New York, half-sister of the bride, and Robert Murdock, a close friend.

The Mellons arrived in New York Wednesday. They remained in seclusion, attending a few shows and visiting with friends.

DEFENSE FUND RAISED TO FIGHT HIGHER TAX ASSESSMENT

SOUTH HILLS STAGES 3 RALLIES

Thousands Rush to Protest Tax Boost on Last Day For Filing of Appeals

Raising of a defense fund to pay an attorney to fight proposed increases in tax assessments was started last night by more than 1,000 residents of the Nineteenth Ward who met in Brookline.

Two other protest meetings were held, one in East Carnegie and the other in Carrick. The meetings last night were to arouse last minute protests against the increase in tax assessments. Today is the last day in which appeals may be taken, the City Assessor's office remaining open until 5 o'clock.

EXPECT MANY MORE

Two central deposit stations for appeals were named at the Carrick meeting in the Carrick High School. Appeals can be left at the Carrick Bank or at the Brentwood State Bank, where they will be collected and sent to the assessors' office. Hundreds of new appeals are expected to be filed today.

Residents of Mt. Washington and West Liberty, communities in the Nineteenth Ward, attended the Brookline meeting. R. J. McCrory, president of the Washington Heights Board of Trade, which held a meeting of more than 2,000 taxpayers Monday, said the Mt. Washington organization is attempting to lay the foundation of a union of all taxpayers in the ward in order to fight the assessments before the courts if necessary.

On the recommendations of J. F. Moore, chairman of a special committee to fight the increased assessments, collections were started for the defense fund.

THREATEN LEGAL ACTION

E. C. Trott, former burgess of Carrick Borough, presided at the Carrick meeting. He advised taxpayers on making their appeals and announced the location of the two deposit stations. The speakers were Harold M. Irons, former assistant city solicitor; W. R. Landefeld, Joseph Lewis and Trott. It was also stated that court action would result if the city assessors refused to consider the appeals.

BLAMES "HIGHER-UPS"

Former Solicitor Irons in his talk said:

"The assessors are told by the 'higher-ups' to increase the assessment so that Council can increase the borrowing power. They have been borrowing to the limit now."

Nearly 100 taxpayers in the Twenty-eighth Ward met in the East Carnegie Public School and a committee was named to make formal protest to the assessors. It was said there have been no public improvements since the ward was formed, four years ago, from Chartiers Township. The taxes, it was said, have been increased from 50 to 300 per cent.

DENIES MORE TIME

Chief City Assessor Thomas C. McMahon stated there have been numerous requests for further extension of time to file appeals, but this is impossible because it is necessary to get to work on the routine task of preparing the new tax books. McMahon said the books must be ready in order to begin the collection of taxes at the first of the year. It was estimated last night that the total number of appeals from all parts of the city would reach 2,900.

Meanwhile conditions in other sections of North and South Dakota and Western Nebraska were somewhat nearer normal today as a result of communication repairs, and there was time to take stock of the damage done. Wire and power officials in North Dakota figured damage to their lines would be between $250,00 and $500,000.

CAUSES TWO DEATHS

The storm was the worst November snow fall recorded in North Dakota in 22 years, pioneer residents said. Telephone and telegraph officials estimated that more than 5,000 poles had been levelled by the snow and ice. Two deaths were indirectly attributed to the storm.

Miss Horess was struck in the face by the men, police at the South Side station reported. Miss Wenzelburger was not harmed, but suffered from shock, police said. After being treated at the South Side Hospital the girls were sent home.

Anthony Eimcich and Frank Kaplan, driver and helper on a bakery truck, found the girls seated by the roadway early today. After taking them to the hospital the men reported the incident to police.

BEADLING BOY LOSES IN RACE WITH DEATH

Falls Off Brother's Truck In Mt. Lebanon; 13 Hurt In Other Auto Accidents

A race against death was lost last night when Anthony Delach, 15, of Beadling, died in Mercy Hospital from injuries suffered several hours before in a fall from a truck driven by his brother in Mt. Lebanon.

Sirens of motorcycle police from Mt. Lebanon and Dormont cleared traffic-congested West Liberty avenue during the evening rush hour for the ambulance as it sped to the hospital with the injured boy. Their race to save the life of the boy, who suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries, proved futile when he died, several hours later.

3 HURT WAITING TROLLEY

Three women, riding in an automobile driven by John Haser, 26, of 169 Galatin street, Uniontown, were injured last night when, police say, the car collided with a truck driven by Elmer Cheffins, of 10 Furley street, at Frankstown and Crab Hollow roads, Penn Township. The victims, cut and bruised, taken to the Columbia Hospital by Constable Samuel Bickerstaff, were Ella Cahill, 30; Mae Selford, 21, and Ethel Chalmers, 19, of 117 Shady avenue. After receiving treatment they were able to leave.

CHILD PARLEY DRAWS REPORT FOR HOOVER

Committee Will Recommend Bureau Action; Findings To Be Given President

By PIERCE MILLER,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. President Hoover's conference on child health and protection will close today with findings of the various committees covering every phase of child welfare and health activities, ready for submission to the President.

DECIDE BUREAU'S FUTURE

Before adjournment a group of three men and one woman will settle the fate of the Children's Bureau insofar as the conference action can affect the Bureau's future.

The conference, arranged more than a year ago, and the committees set up and functioning during that period, had hardly gotten under way when a storm burst over the question of whether the Children's Bureau should remain under the Labor Department, or its activities of a medical nature be transferred to the Public Health Service.

A fight for control of the activities of maternity, infancy and child hygiene, between advocates of the Children's Bureau and the public health authorities, has been brewing since the Sheppard-Towner act, covering this phase of the Bureau's work, lapsed in 1929.

Today the procedure committee, composed of Prof. F. J. Kelly, of Idaho University, Moscow, Ida.; Homer Folks, of New York, executive secretary of the State Charities Aid; Dr. S. J. Crumrine, head of the American Child Health Association, of New York, and Mrs. Henry Breckinridge, of Kentucky, must select one of two reports that have come out of the committees on the subject.

HAVE CHOICE OF TWO

The committee on public health administration, headed by Surgeon General Cummings, of the Public Health Service, has a recommendation favoring transfer to the Public Health Service of all activities except those pertaining to women's and children's welfare.

The committee covering prevention, maintenance and protection, headed by Dr. C. C. Carstens, of New York, executive secretary of the Child Welfare League of New York, has one urging the Children's Bureau retain its activities and restore those covered by the Sheppard-Towner act.

The procedure committee, Carstens said, can select one or the other for inclusion in the final conference report to the President, or it can "throw out" both.

Highways Worker Crushed by Machine

Cheeseborough is a foreman for the State Department of Highways, and was working near Oakdale at the time of the accident late yesterday. At the hospital it was said he was suffering from a crushed chest.

HOOVER AGAINST DEBT DELAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Regardless of a prospective deficit, President Hoover has disapproved suggestions for suspending this year all reduction of the public debt.

In the interest of sound government financing the chief executive announced yesterday he wished left alone the sinking fund set aside for reducing the obligations of the United States.

With his announcement, what hopes remained for a continuance of the current 1 per cent reduction in income tax rates sank to a new low.

The proposal had been made in several quarters that the sinking fund, now about $430,000,000 a year, be applied through congressional authorization against this year's expenditures. It was hoped to avert, or reduce to a minimum, the deficit and also permit continuance of the low tax rate.

The President indicated other funds which have been applied to debt reduction during the surplus years would be available for current use. These include foreign debt payments and other receipts which have not been needed for immediate government operations.

POSTAL CUTS QUIZ URGED BY KENDALL

Presidential Ban of Further Surveys Follows Plea; Charges Many Vacancies

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22. With further reduction in postal service and employes prohibited by presidential order following his protest, Representative Samuel Kendall (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, may demand a congressional investigation of curtailments already made, he said today.

CHARGES 55 MILLION DEFICIT

The department, Kendall charged, has reduced postal service in large cities and has failed to fill hundreds of vacancies, in its efforts to prevent a postal deficit, estimated for the current year ending June 30 at $55,000,000.

When he returned to Washington recently, Kendall protested to Postmaster General Brown and President Hoover that surveys were in progress designed to eliminate many more postal employes.

Kendall claims much damage already has been done, and a congressional investigation may be necessary to air complaints. He said:

"From letters I have received it is evident the postal service has been curtailed and injured in 21 of our largest cities.

"These surveys resulted in the curtailment of one to two deliveries and collections to reduce expenses.

"Surveys now are in progress in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

THOUSANDS OF PROTESTS

"There is no demand from the people for a curtailment, but since the policy was adopted thousands have filed protests.

"As these surveys were made without regard to the primary duty to give good service, it seems an investigation should be made by Congress when persons injured by the new service might be heard."

WIDOW ABSENT

Allen apparently was pleased at the verdict. His wife was in the courtroom, but his daughter, Mrs. Edith Allen McConeghy, widow of the slain man, who testified for her father, was reported ill.

McConeghy was fatally wounded by Allen in front of the latter's home last August 2. Allen claimed self defense, testifying that his son-in-law attacked him and he fired while lying on the ground. Mrs. McConeghy testified her father and husband had no quarrel previous to the shooting.

The Most Remarkable Photographs Ever Published

'Andree's Own Pictures of His Polar Balloon Disaster That Lay in Ice With Explorers' Bodies for 33 Years.

When Andree and his two companions, Strindberg and Fraenkel, landed with their balloon on the arctic ice floe on July 14, 1897, they took a number of photographs of themselves.

When they finally perished on White Island amid arctic desolation they left behind them these films.

Buried in ice and snow, with the bodies of the three heroes who made them, these photographic records lay for 33 years.

Amid the remains of Andree and his comrades and the relics of their tragic adventure, the films were found last August, together with the diaries and other records of the lost explorers.

The films were developed in Stockholm by Swedish scientists. Many had been spoiled, but others had withstood the ravages of time and the elements for 33 years, and proved to be the most amazing pictures in the annals of photography.

Coolidge Sees Christmas Checks Blow to Slump

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 22.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

Nearly every day the current news reports some item that indicates how great this country is and how great are its resources. We are sometimes criticized for putting too much emphasis on size. It is true that quality is often more important than quantity.

But greatness in nearly every direction indicates power, and power is capacity for making progress and doing good.

Recently it was announced that the banks were about to pay $632,000,000 to the Christmas clubs which make regular saving deposits during the year in order to provide funds for the needs of the holiday season. This great sum is more impressive because it is so representative of the earnings and savings of the people. It would pay many times over the national debt at the end of the Revolutionary War.

Calvin Coolidge

The beneficial effect that will be secured from putting a large proportion of this money into circulation is important. It will be used for cash purchases. If its owners will buy merchandise currently produced which in the future will require replacement the present needs of business and of the unemployed will be best served. The reserve power of the people, of which this is a good example, always helps to relieve any situation.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

RULING NEAR IN PLAY TEACHER'S JOB FIGHT

DISMISSAL UPHELD BY SUPERIORS

Officials Deny Frameup at Hearing as Miss McKnight Holds Ouster Undeserved

A decision in the case of Miss Mary Jane S. McKnight, recently discharged from her position as recreation assistant, probably will be rendered next week by the Civil Service Commission, according to Dr. F. H. Frederick, chairman.

CROWD AT HEARING

A room crowded to capacity heard Miss McKnight appeal her discharge before the commission yesterday. She contended that, after 15 years faithful service, she had been suspended by W. C. Batchelor, head of the Bureau of Recreation and later discharged by Director of Public Works Edward G. Lang.

Batchelor, questioned by Dennis Mulvihill, the complainant's counsel, contended that Miss McKnight's service had not been satisfactory during the six years he has held his present post as superintendent of the bureau.

Cross-examined by Assistant City Solicitor B. L. Steinberg, Miss McKnight admitted she had been late on occasions and absent because of illness while assigned to duty at the West Penn, Warrington and Lewis playgrounds. Her lateness, she said, was due to the death of her father and subsequent illness of her mother, which placed the burden of many unusual duties upon herself.

MOVED AS SAFETY MEASURE

Miss McKnight also admitted moving her playground class from a room in the Lewis playground she insisted was unsafe without orders from her superiors, although she insisted the class was conducted in proper fashion elsewhere. She had called the condition of the room to the attention of Batchelor, specifying wire screens that would prevent children leaving by the windows in case of fire and and a defective guard around a stove.

Fireman Robert Capes and Patrolman Frank F. Myers, who lectured on safety to the children at that playground, testified they had looked over the room and had found nothing sufficiently dangerous to mention to their superiors. Capes said he felt the screens were placed to prevent children from falling through the windows. The fire extinguishers were empty, however, he said.

DENIES "FRAMING"

Miss McKnight's lateness was habitual, according to J. H. McGeary, one of her superiors, who testified he had refused to put an O. K. on her time sheets. He vehemently denied that Batchelor had asked him to aid in "framing" the discharged employe. This denial afterwards was even more vehemently made by Batchelor himself.

Steinberg contended the question of the safety of the Lewis playground was one for the heads of the bureau to decide. He insisted they were responsible and that Miss McKnight should have obeyed orders regardless of her own opinions on the subject. The latter testified that she felt the safety of the children made it necessary for her to take action. In regard to lateness, she said she had requested permission to report 30 minutes late each day, making up the time in the evenings. This permission, she said, was refused, although it had been granted to others. She said she had not taken up the matter with Director Lang.

Witnesses testifying to Miss McKnight's regular work habits and character were Miss Jennie Patterson and Charles Patterson, who live next to the Lewis playground; Mrs. William Price, Mrs. Marie Schantz, 4654 Chance street; Mrs. Grace Blennik, 4601 Monongahela street, and Mrs. Mary T. Moran, 104 Pasadena street.

PATMAN BACKS BONUS FIGHT

By WRIGHT PATMAN,

Democratic Member of the National House of Representatives from Texas.

(Written expressly for Universal Service)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Payment by the government of the World War veterans' adjusted compensation certificates in cash now is the thing to do to bring immediate prosperity to the entire nation.

Every city and town in the country will be immediately benefited, and this can be done without increasing taxes.

The government can now borrow money at 2 per cent interest. Two billion dollars added to the $700,000,000 now in the treasury for the purpose of retiring these certificates will pay them all now.

During the last decade, the war debt has been paid off at the average rate of $1,000,000,000 a year, having been reduced from $26,000,000,000 to $16,000,000,000.

Our allies in the World War will pay us at least $7,000,000,000, which will reduce the war debt to $9,000,000,000. When that is paid an effort will be made by our foreign debtors for cancellation.

Let us hold up paying the principal of the war debt two or three years at least, and use that money to pay these certificates.

DENTISTS VIEW TEETH CLINICS

National authorities on specific dental treatments occupy the closing sessions today of the forty-ninth annual convention of the Odontological Society of Western Pennsylvania in the William Penn Hotel.

More than 600 dentists were registered during the convention which opened Thursday. Nearly 50 clinics were conducted.

The newly elected officers, headed by Dr. Glenn Peiffer, of Sewickley, were preparing to lay plans for the state dental meet scheduled here next May. Other officers named were Dr. C. R. Garman, Pittsburgh, vice president; Dr. W. Earle Craig, Pittsburgh, secretary; Dr. D. H. Carnahan, Pittsburgh, treasurer; Dr. M. M. Jaquette, Uniontown, assistant secretary, and Dr. Leslie Waddill, Pittsburgh, exhibit manager.

Dr. George Winter, of St. Louis, presented the feature program yesterday, demonstrating the modern technique in lower wisdom tooth extraction. Dr. Winter has carried on research work on this case for years, resulting in the method by which the extraction can be accomplished in a few minutes. He held clinics with actual patients.

To avert a constable's sale of their furniture, Mrs. Catherine Mohr, 74, and her 93-year-old mother, both widows, moved from their apartment, Center avenue, Emsworth, for which they owed two months rent. Mrs. Mohr said she had secured another home in Taylor avenue, Bellevue.

HUNT KIDNAPED GIRL IN SNOW

FORT MORGAN, Col., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—A searching party was organized today to brave snow-heaped mountain highways in an effort to rescue Miss Enid Marriott, missing Wiggins, Col., school teacher, whom authorities believe is a prisoner in some secluded mountain cabin.

Officers who said they had acquired "new and valuable information" have accepted the theory the girl was kidnaped Sunday night and is being held for ransom. They associated her disappearance with a sedan parked near the Wiggins Station as she alighted from a train returning from a week-end visit in Denver.

George C. Carlson, brother-in-law of the missing girl, has posted a $1,000 reward for location of Miss Marriott, dead or alive.

SANTANDER, Spain, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Eight of the 13 passengers of the DO-X German seaplane, who came here from Bordeaux and had passageway to Corunna, Spain, have left the craft and will not continue with it when the airplane leaves.

Dr. Claude Dornier, inventor and builder of the ship, has not announced whether the ship will go to Ferrol or to Corunna, but it is believed landing conditions are better at Ferrol.

COWAN NAMED AIDE TO ERK

Cowan's grandfather was a neighbor of Andrew Carnegie's parents on the North Side, a part of the Thirty-second District. Cowan's first schooling was in the old First Ward building in old Allegheny.

Reform Could Be Palatable If Not Served So Lumpy

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Getting so you don't recognize prominent men unless they have their pictures taken with their lawyers.

This is result of reform within the party.

It's not a popular game. But everybody's playing it.

It's taught us one thing.

Politicians are all fat. While reformers are anemic.

And reformers are only reformers until they can afford their own lawyers.

How long does reform last? (How long does it take a washed hog to return to the wallow)?

Trouble with present reform is that it's lumpy.

They don't spread it out evenly.

All the paging seems to be for John Doe. Who is never a guest of the hotel.

The office seeks the man. But the law never looks higher than the office boy.

Two of Season's Buds To Be Honor Guests At Lunch Dec. 11

Just when one decides that the social calendar for the coming weeks is settled at last, and that more parties just couldn't be squeezed in, even by such resourceful young folks as the debutantes, along comes news of more affairs honoring these stars of the social world.

I've just heard of an entertainment for two of the popular buds of the season, Elizabeth Booth Miller, daughter of the William Booth Millers, of Sewickley, and Frances Kier, daughter of the Frank J. Kiers, of Beechwood boulevard.

Mrs. Frederick B. Hufnagel, of Sewickley, will give a luncheon for them on December 11 in the Twentieth Century Club.

College Club Members Entertained With Talk On Ancient Angkor

Standing room was at a premium again at the College Club yesterday afternoon, something which frequently happens for the very fine Friday afternoon programs arranged for the members. Ross Skinner, director of world cruises for Thomas Cook and Son, was yesterday's speaker, and his subject material was fascinating and magnificent Angkor, in Cambodia, Indo-China. It is singular that the College Club's neighbor, the Twentieth Century Club, heard a lecture on the same subject only last Monday.

Mr. Skinner said no authentic antique remains except stone in these jungle-covered ruins which the French government has been preserving since Cambodia was made a French protectorate in 1907.

Edward B. Lee, Pittsburgh architect, spoke of the ruins from an architectural standpoint, and said that the Angkor temples were raised by muscle and that the results made modern architects marvel. Similar delicate and imaginative details present in the elaborate decorations have been found in Yucatan excavations, Mr. Lee said.

FIX UP PERSIAN ENVOY'S HOME

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP) With furniture in its once barren halls and pictures on its walls, the American legation at Teheran, Persia, again is a fit abode for an American diplomat.

Accompanied by his family, the American minister, Charles G. Hart, arrived at the Persian capital last year with only a few possessions packed in overnight bags. They had traveled safely by way of Russia, but $10,000 worth of furniture and personal effects failed to weather the bandit-infested territory between a southern port and the capital. The entire lot just disappeared and the legation was bare.

The Persian government assured Minister Hart it would make good the loss, but the State Department ordered permanent furnishings installed to relieve Hart's successors of the bandit hazard.

What Men Might Have Been. What Will Men of Future Be?

President Knudsen, of the big Chevrolet company, lunching with a friend in New York this week, asked:

"Have you read in the American Weekly those articles by Prof. Thevenin, speculating on men of the future, what they will be like and what they might have been today, if circumstances had been different?"

WE MIGHT HAVE LIVED IN WATER.

Instead of being land animals, Prof. Thevenin conceives it possible that men might have been sea-dwelling animals, or amphibian, like the seal, spending most of the time in the water, occasionally coming up on the land.

All life began in the sea. At first plants grew above water on islands, says Prof. Thevenin, then some of the smaller marine creatures crawled on the land, then came the insects, then gradually through evolution all the other forms of animal life, and, finally, man to boss the entire performance.

WE MIGHT have stayed in the water and developed there, with webbed hands and feet and unlimited supplies of food from fishes.

If that had happened men would not have created fire, not needing it in the water. There would have been no industry and men would have remained savages.

As to what men may be in the future, who can tell? Only 12,000 years ago man had no better weapon than a sharpened flint. Now he has the machine gun, the airplane, the submarine.

What will he have 1,000,000 years hence?

Deeply interested in science, the American Weekly which you will receive with tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sunday Sun-Telegraph, covers also the whole field of human interest, including the humble field of stockings.

Earth's Most Expensive Stockings

You see above, for instance, the most expensive pair of stockings in the world. It would be much better if ladies would concentrate attention on their foreheads, and the soulful expression of the eyes, rather than relying on thin ankles, fat calves, or expensive stockings for their charm.

We admit that is a matter of opinion.

Specializing in all instructive things the American Weekly prints this interesting picture of a Rhodesian piano. This primitive brother of ours, on an instrument made of rawhide, bones and gourds, hammers out a very acceptable music.

Civilized beings, especially if they have children in the house, should have a real piano, remembering the words of Henry Ford who plays the violin:

"Don't be content to listen. Do something yourself, play something even if you can't play too well."

A Primitive Piano, But a Real One

Why should many ladies want to marry one man, not much to look at? But they did, and they do, strange creatures.

You see them in the American Weekly with tomorrow's Pittsburgh Sunday Sun-Telegraph.

See also the lady who won the prize for wearing the saddest look, portraying sorrow. Sadder ones could have been seen in Wall street that didn't get any prizes.

Why should gentlemen want to hunt the heads of others, cut them off, dry the skulls and preserve them?

Savages in Formosa enjoy that sport. They cut off the heads of many Japanese who tried to keep them out with a wire fence heavily charged with electricity.

This is a strange world, of science, love, headhunters and the American Weekly, which you receive every week with the Pittsburgh Sunday Sun-Telegraph, reflects that strange world, as the limpid pool reflected the face of the late Narcissus.

There is this difference, Narcissus' pool was bad for him, made him think too much about himself.

The American Weekly, to which we refer here, is good for those who look into it, stimulates them, makes them think, makes them abler.

BOLERO CONTINUES TO BE APPROVED BY PARISIENNES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—The bolero just bowls along. And when it is short and of fur, well, there is no end to its staggering possibilities. The bolero with the broadcloth or woolen skirt is having the time of its life here. It is seen everywhere and is beloved of all young women. For there is something excessively trig and neat about such a costume and a girl can wear it throughout the day and be sartorially prepared for any function, unless, of course, it is the ultra-formal affair. Many of these abbreviated boleros are compensated for lack of inches by lavish collars that frame the face in a most becoming way. The skirts are usually on long, straight lines, the best type of skirt for wear with the short fur bolero that needs a trig partner to show its real smartness and adaptability.

VIONNET HAS BEEN tremendously successful this year and her newest creations and ideas are rapidly being copied and adapted by everybody. She was one of the first to show the little bolero of fur with a walking skirt of woolen and now that fashion is legion. We are pleased therefore to be able to send a sketch of such a costume done in the authentic Vionnet manner. The very short bolero with the graceful collar is of black astrakan. The skirt is of smooth black broadcloth. A most youthful and youthifying fashion.

THE RUSSIAN INFLUENCE cannot be denied. And who would wish to do so? We have coats and suits of Cossack inspiration in great abundance. Lanvin is responsible for the coat depicted here. It is of black brushed broadcloth. The cravat collar and cuffs are of black dyed ermine. The leather belt and the lines of the coat are quite obvious of Russian inspiration. Lanvin has used this theme for many of her newest models.

URGE AIR MAIL LINE TO SOUTH

The Chamber of Commerce yesterday asked the employment of a local architect, in urging County Commissioners to select the designer for the proposed Town Hall by competition, when plans for the building are ready for consideration.

In another action the Chamber recommended to the Postoffice Department the establishment of an air mail route between Pittsburgh and Washington. The recommendation stressed the fact that Pittsburgh has no air mail route to the South.

Yankees in France Await Court Martial

PARIS, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—The Paris edition of the Chicago Tribune today said that six Americans were in a military prison at Rouen awaiting court martial as deserters or military defaulters. All are naturalized American citizens, but the embassy is powerless to act since the United States has not a naturalization treaty with France.

Two of their names were given as Leon Bogen, of New York, and Alexander Dumoulin, of Detroit. Another, Gabriel Rohmer, of New York, was released a few days ago.

Miss Anna McGinnis, of the Pittsburgh Railways, receives reports of things lost on street cars. Umbrellas, purses, diaries, war souvenirs, hats, gloves and so forth. It's pretty difficult to surprise Miss McGinnis by telling her you've lost something different on a trolley, but the other day a woman did. A woman called up and said she had lost a plate of hot beans on a North Side car. The woman said she was taking the beans from her home to a friend in the hospital and that when she got off the car she forgot them.

Miss McGinnis looked under Division B in the lost-but-found report but could not find the plate of beans listed. The woman became pretty mad and suggested that the conductor had eaten the beans but the conductor denied this usation. He said he didn't like beans.

Miss McGinnis was receiving from that incident when she discovered a note in a young woman's purse, which had been lost. The note contained this exchange of lines:

"Are you married?"

"I wouldn't marry the best man in the world.' '

"Yeah?"

By vocation Bill Shore, Jr., the engineer, is, as we just said, an engineer, but once, by avocation, he was a cook. He cooked a meal for the Homewood Hunting and Fishing Club during the hunting season.

A dozen members were at their hunting club near Sinnamahoning in the wilds somewhere in Pennsylvania. Removed from civilization, they had exhausted their food supply and what's more, the cook was absent.

Bill told the rest to go hunting that afternoon and he'd take care of the dinner. They did and he did. He decided on potpie.

From the dinner of the previous day he salvaged a hock of ham and left-over cabbage. He tossed in a can of corn and a few boiled potatoes. He reached a pinnacle of culinary success when he stumbled across an owl and a wildcat which had been shot the day before. All these were introduced to each other in a huge dishpan which was placed over a hot fire.

The rest of the details we shall skip. But that was the first and last meal ever cooked by Bill Shore, Jr.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Nov. 22.
To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

All I know is just what I read in want ads. I see where they say Wall Street is coming back, yep, coming back for more. They figure people about had time to save up another little dab. That's one good thing about the rascals though, they always give you warning when they are coming. There ought to be some way figured out just what it takes to support that whole gang (in the manner in which they are accustomed), then charge everybody in the U. S. so much and deduct it from their salary. That would eliminate all speculation and everybody would know just where they stood. Yours,

Film Executives' Offices Reflect the Glamor Of Hollywood

By HARRISON CARROLL.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 22.

Hollywood's glamor is reflected even in the business offices of film executives.

Jack Warner's sanctum is perhaps the piece-de-resistance, with Cecil B. De Mille's running it a close second. These offices are the opposite extremes of elegance, Warner's being the last word in the modern style, while De Mille's is gothic in its splendor.

The outstanding features of Warner's second-floor office are a black rug with grey and silver border, a black and silver ceiling and a glazed-glass panel back of Jack's desk, which not only is an ornament, but also is a source of indirect lighting. Carved in the glass of this panel is a futuristic tree with long, drooping branches.

Cecil B. De Mille

By means of a black marble staircase, with a nickel rail, the head of Warner Brothers' studio can descend to the first-floor section of his domain, which includes a large dining room, with kitchen attached, a steam room and a conference room. All furnishings and decorations are of the modern type.

HAS PRIVATE LIBRARY

Cecil B. De Mille's office is peculiarly expressive of the man. It is a large room, 25 by 60 feet, and is two stories in height. The ceiling is vaulted and beamed.

At the north end is a huge fireplace. A staircase opposite leads to a second-floor dining room. Carved Gothic cabinets on the east side contain a collection of rare firearms and a portion of De Mille's private library, which contains 12,00 volumes.

Throughout the room are various mementos of De Mille pictures: a suit of armor worn by the late Wallace Reid in "Joan the Woman," crown of thorns of "The King of Kings" and a replica of the great sphinxes of "The Ten Commandments."

Despite it's size, the room is crowded. The very atmosphere is steeped with richness.

SOME HAVE SIMPLICITY

Other offices are more simple. Louis B. Mayer has a suite of two rooms. The first has heavy mahogany paneling, old English style, to the ceiling. Upon a pedestal is a bronze bust of Washington. There are signed portraits of Coolidge and Hoover; also pictures of the producer's family. The second office is of colonial style, and is done in light tones.

Irving Thalberg

Irving Thalberg's office is modernistic, like Warner's, but less elaborate. Two sides are practically all glass. Thalberg's desk is of steel with an enormous glass top. The furniture is of steel. The wall decorations are few, a couple of etchings and a picture of the producer's wife, Norma Shearer.

Bar Committee Elects T. F. Ryan

T. F. Ryan, of Bialas, Ryan, McIntyre & Mackrell, has been elected a member of the executive committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association to fill the unexpired term of Judge William H. McNaugher. Ryan was elected by other members of the executive committee.

NEW HOLLYWOOD STAR IS OUR OLD FRIEND MARIE DRESSLER

By GEORGE SEIBEL

For some years Marie Dressler has been doing "bits" in the pictures, until in "Anna Christie" her bit became a hit.

George Seibel

Now some bright mind in Hollywood has made the discovery that the patrons like acting, and that there are plenty of pretty dolls but few actresses. So Marie Dressler has had a chance to star, and she does star in "Min and Bill," though Wallace Beery's name is printed as large as hers.

This picture at the Penn Theater is made from Lorna Moon's novel, "Dark Star"—but the bright mind probably thought a comic-strip title would pull better.

That is unimportant, for it's a good picture. It might be by Eugene O'Neill himself, the realism of the waterfront in a Western seaport being laid on thick. Marie Dressler is the keeper of a dive and foster mother of a growing girl whose real mother is an abandoned creature.

Dorothy Jordan does appealing work as the girl, and Marjorie Rambeau is brilliant and hard-boiled as the mother.

Marie Dressler's harshness, hiding her love for the girl she has watched over, gives her many opportunities for great acting that touches the heart.

Among the exciting episodes is a scrimmage with Wallace Beery after he has fallen for the wiles of Bella, the girl's mother. All the great battles of history, from Achilles and Hector to Sharkey and Schmeling, were kaffeeklatches compared with that scrimmage.

"Min and Bill" is a good story, well directed and pictured. Then there's Oscar, who has an amusing spirit seance at his organ, and there's David Pesetzki, whose orchestra plays Bizet's "Carmen" with spirit. And Henry Santrey's stage show, "Soldiers of Fortune," combines good dancing with novel minstrel numbers. Good pictures of the flight of the DO-X lend special interest to the news "lm.

J. Fred Lissfelt

Kipnis is a fine musician, an excellent singer. His voice has superb depths, a mezza - voice of startling certainty and beauty, if not overworked for its own sake instead of interpretation, and dramatic possibilities which he fortunately restrains with utmost respect for the limitations of his songs. His diction displays the influence of Bayreuth, where he is one of the pillars of the Wagnerian festival, but his fluent singing has none of the evils of the German school.

The Handel airs were marked with dignity. A lighter voice might have secured the truest style with more ease. Four good songs of Schubert brought many a long phrase and lovely nuance, making the Serenade exceptionally attractive. In the Strauss group, the musician was paramount, the fine clarity of the vocal line standing sharply against such complex accompaniment. A number of Russian folksongs gave Kipnis his best opportunity, and while his singing grew constantly more skillful, here his powers as a singing actor came to the fore. A most eloquent reading of an air from Verdi's Don Carlos closed the program.

As encores Beethoven's "Ich Liebe Dich," a pitfall for many singers, was a happy choice, and Brahms' "Wie ist Du Meine Konigin," a love song of intense adoration. A most dignified Chorale came as benediction. Earl Truxell played over-cautious accompaniments.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

'THE BIG TRAIL' IS BIG IN PRODUCTION IN THE ALDINE

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

Westward, ho. The pioneers are at it again—in the movies. Down in the Aldine they are pushing across Oregon in a picture titled "The Big Trail."

And leading them is none other than John Wayne. He used to be a technician at the Fox studio. Now he's the latest romantic hero of moviedom. He's a courageous scout who takes the pioneers toward the setting sun and who gets the girl at the end of the trail.

This is Mr. Wayne's first movie role—at least his first important part. He is tall and easy to look at. But he isn't very convincing as an actor.

'TIS A SPECTACLE

Yet it isn't all his fault. The movie-makers put him in one or two rather silly spots. While a blizzard howls and rages about, they have him making a schoolboy oration about Country and Ideals. But it doesn't ring true. Country and the thought of future generations are very far away when the feet and hands are numb and the heart is weary.

But it's not the purpose here to belittle the film. Though it is far from a great picture, it is a big picture. It is a spectacle! And many of its scenes are impressive.

Ever the wagon train rolls westward. Across rivers, through rivers and over the desert it goes. Indians are met with and fought. Their war cries shriek out from the sound screen.

MOVIE VILLAINY

And within the ranks of the wagon train itself all isn't harmony. There's a big black-whiskered villain and a couple of his henchmen who are always trying to shoot the hero in the back. It's all such dyed-in-the-wool movie villainy that it doesn't fit in very well with the stupendous theme of the valiant pioneers.

Raoul Walsh directed. And a large cast of principals and thousands of extra players appear. El Brendel, the Swedish comic, has been dragged in to furnish some comedy. Marguerite Churchill is heroine. Tyrone Power does the black-whiskered gentleman act and a closeup of his face is enough to scare the children.

Lavish production saves this film. It is the panoramic scenes of the westward trek that make it worth while.

ENRIGHT HAS POWELL AND COMEDY PICTURE

Dick Powell, back from New York and a week's vacation, is presenting "Happy Landing" as the stage feature in the Enright. The screen is offering Winnie Lightner's film, "The Life of the Party."

This picture, which proved itself an amusing comedy on its downtown presentation in the Stanley recently, concerns two working girls who become gold-diggers. It is crowded with the tomboy-clown antics and wise-cracks of the gay Winnie. It begins in New York and ends in Havana. Irene Delroy and Charles Butterworth are prominent in the cast.

Mr. Powell's new show is featuring two acts which won acclaim in the Stanley the week just closed. These are Geraldine and Joe, a couple of knockout juvenile entertainers, and the Five Maxellos. The Maxellos are flip-flopping acrobats. Jean Boydell, who sings and clowns, and the Enright Rockets are on the bill. Mr Powell puts his stage band through some lively tunes and does some singing.

Johnny Mitchell gives an organlogue.

'SILVER HORDE' NOW IN SHERIDAN SQUARE

By BARBARA I. WILBERT

"The Silver Horde," now being shown in the Sheridan Square, introduces "Cherry Malotte," branded as the most notorious woman in the Northland. This role is very ably played by Evelyn Brent. She is the fairest, squarest, truest girl that, perhaps, you have ever known. She gives all she possesses for the man she loves with no hope of any return. You like this girl—you can't help it. No matter what her other reputation is she has the actions of a lady.

Men swear by this girl of the North, and when you know her as portrayed by Miss Brent you swear by her, too. Louis Wolheim is most fittingly described by the girl herself as her "watch-dog."

"The Silver Horde" does not neglect its title. In this picture we see the salmon on its journey from the net to the can. If for this only, the show is worth seeing. However, the acting of Miss Brent makes it enjoyably so. It is amazing that a character by repute so weak could be so convincingly strong. One thing, she knew love when it came to her.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

(Copyright 1930 by Lady Mendl, Inc.)

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

That Palmer guy finally found out that there was something else besides Broadway, which is what I wish I could do . . . He heard my radio gab, he writes, from some lonely sector in Maryland.

"I listen to your remarks about this one and that one on Broadway every Tuesday night and the other events that have shaken the Main Stem. How Carry Chorine has phffft with Johnny Jupperheimer and is now ankling with Tommy Smith. Who is having a baby and who isn't. Who is having it Reno-vated or Paris'd, and I listen with fascinated attention. Then when you have finished and your orchestra plays 'Give My Regards to Broadway,' I ease back in my chair near the pleasant log fire and thank God I am 300 miles away. I recall the days when, not so very long ago, I used to haunt the Canyon of What? Every night, all night, from Tony's at cocktail time to Guinan's at breakfast. I try to figure out why such an utterly stupid crowd of utterly colorless people tramped all through the sticky nights to Florence's, the Madrid, the Dizzy Club, the Furnace, Hot Feet's, Helen Morgan's, Hymie's place, and the rest. As far as I can remember there was only one person who had any sound excuse at all for being there and that was you. You weren't playing—you were working. Maybe fresh air has gone to my head, or perhaps I am just getting old. Whatever it is, I am quite definitely beyond the charms of Broadway. And nothing makes me quite so happy in my quiet existence here as to listen to your reports over the air of that same tawdry life going on in the same old tiresome way."

But that isn't what I want, at all . . . Palmer is tired of Park Row, too . . . Where he was fouled . . . I couldn't stand the quiet existence, at all . . . I mean, do not think I could stand it . . . But I do know I would welcome a change of scenery . . . Only the other night when I happened to motor down past the Italian Quarter on First Avenue, a scene I had never witnessed, my eyes opened wide! . . . It was something different . . . Different types . . . Different smells . . . Different noises . . . It was fascinating for the few moments it took to speed by the place . . . When I go to Camden for that Unemployed Benefit next week I know I'll be thrilled . . . I'll look out the train window and see billboards or something . . . And moo cows . . . And trees and grass and tiny railroad depots and sky . . . The only thing about the sky that gets me around here is that part of the sky between 42nd and 59th Streets at night . . . When the bulbs on the Stem light up the heavens . . . That hasn't wearied me yet . . . It is a scene even Belasco or Urban couldn't imitate . . . So H. I. Phillips fell for that article I wrote and took it seriously . . . Heheheh . . . The mags next week will give the Street something to titter about with their exposes about it . . . Which will be another thrill.

Milt Cross was groaning a little, too . . . "I've never had a vacation," Milt said . . . He's never had a vacation! . . . Gee, I thought I was alone with that squawk.

"What makes me feel rotten," I said to Milt, "is staying up all night trying to get a day in advance and leaving the office sometimes around nine or ten in the morning . . . And as I exit from the building I see all those cartoonists coming in attired in their golf pants . . . They looked so refreshed and they haven't any lines in their pans . . . They tell me that they are going to play golf all day and are just coming to the office to get their bags and sticks."

So Milt said:

"Have you noticed what's become of some of those guys?"

I didn't know what became of them until Milt told me . . . Five of them, at least, are now looking for jobs . . . They found time to play! . . . And their cartoon strips got unfunny or something . . . And when your stuff begins to wilt the heads of the syndication outfit or your paper start looking for fellers who are more interested in their work than they are in golf . . . But what made me think was this: I wouldn't have known that those guys were fired or that their stuff wasn't appearing in the rag until my attention was called to the fact . . . Proving an old theory . . . That you are never missed. You are never, never, never, never, never missed.

It must be grand to be adolescent like those schoolboys who hold an annual dinner . . . And manage to entice what they prefer calling celebrities to their dais . . . The so-called celebs are bored to death and things unfold at a snail's pace and the speeches are dull and nothing happens . . . I suppose when they get back to the campus they tell those who couldn't crash the affair that they met so-and-so, and whose-this and what's-his-name . . . That excites them, the little hero-worshipers, who some day will awaken and have their itty-bitty illusions melted, poor things. . . . It was all so dreary . . . I felt that I was in a cage in a zoo . . . And that they were saying to themselves:

"So that's Winchell? So what?"

Well, I got even with them . . . I told them jokes I had printed at least twice and it served them right . . . It must be nice to be a boy again, though . . . I didn't mean to snap at that kid who said that the lads at The Spectator would like to have me at their affair . . . When will they ever understand that when you have to have over 1,000 different words a day you haven't the time to go to dinners or play or anything? . . . Dinners! . . . They want a free show . . . When I was struggling ten years ago I wish some of those booking men were that anxious to see me perform . . . I feel like a trained seal.

Mary Boland is so funny in "The Vinegar Tree," but what a title for a show! . . . None of us seemed to know the connection at the premiere—until the press agent explained it . . . If the producer is smart, he will shelve that title for something that will attract shekels to the box office . . . Yet there were many of us who thought "Strictly Dishonorable" was a stupid name . . . That hit is in its 60-something or other week! . . . Izzy Elinson is amusing . . . He says that he has been looking around corners for that promised prosperity and all he can find is an apple peddler.

I'm cured . . . S'help me, I'm cured . . . Never no more will I publish anything like what Hannen Swaffer wrote . . . The remark was like cinders in my orbs . . . It all read so childish . . . Nope, never no more will I write such drivel—if I can help it . . . Swaffer's comment, that still makes me ill, was:

". . . And it is true, too, that what I have written about a play is frequently more interesting that the play itself."

Of all things!

MUSICAL SHOW PLOT, MINUS TRIMMINGS, IN STANLEY

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Marilyn Miller, stage star, is appearing in the Stanley in "Sunny," her second talking film. Her first was "Sally."

Like "Sally," "Sunny" is a version of a stage musical comedy. Unlike "Sally," it keeps its musical numbers down to a minimum and goes easy on the dancing. There is not a chorus girl in sight—let alone an entire ensemble.

This all in a way is in the picture's favor. And in another way it isn't. It places too much responsibility on the story itself. And you know what musical comedy stories are. Plus or minus musical embellishments, they are always rather weak affairs.

Joe Donahue, brother of the late Jack Donahue, has a prominent part. He has personality and he has ability. He helps to brighten the production a lot.

Miss Miller has a time of it. She becomes a stowaway on an ocean liner and she marries one man in an effort to win another one. Which sounds impossible. But when stage musical comedy and screen meet nothing is impossible.

The picture has an amusing wedding scene aboard ship and an interesting hunting scene on land. In the latter, Mr. Donahue, a tenderfoot at riding to the hounds, rides around a tree instead. It is a dizzy episode!

The cast includes Lawrence Gray and O. P. Heggie.

"Syncopated Menu" is the stage show. It has some real act. Fred Sanborn is present with his comical makeup and a xylophone. He's a small scream. The Michon Brothers are on hand also. They go in for magic and acrobatics in a comedy way. They're also a scream. A dance foursome is present—one girl and three men. The girl is thrown through the air and the men catch her and go into classical poses. It is a keen exhibition. There are other entertainers, too, including Master of Ceremonies Ed Lowry. He sets his band to "Coming 'Round the Mountains," sings the "Song of the Fool" and gets his share of applause.

Bernie Armstrong presents an organlogue.

GANGSTER GIRL

Cyclone Tim Makes Plans To Rescue Alice

CHAPTER XV.

"Tommy boy," sighed Polack Annie as she lay in his arms, "I believe you now. It didn't seem possible that you, a refined young prince like you, could really care for me—me! You don't even know who I am or what I am. It didn't seem in the deck. But now—"

"Anna honey," whispered Tall Tom Gillespie's Yale-trained son. I'd make any sacrifice rather than give you up. I know any father will be furious. And I hate to hurt him. But this is bigger than everything else. I'd die for you!"

"And—I'd kill for you! Listen, Tommy boy . . . you've got to clear up that Alice business, don't you? Well—I can help you. If Silk ever finds out I rattled on him, he'll strangle me. But that's the chance I'll take. I know where Alice is."

Tommy sat up sharply and gazed down into her eyes.

"You do?" he exclaimed. "Where?"

"Well, in no easy place to spring her. I'll tip you that much. She's in Silk Freeman's flat—in his house."

"Gee. That doesn't sound so tough."

"No? The doorman is a gorilla an' packs two gats. The elevator men the same. In the house, I don't know how much he raised the number o' guards.

"The doors is made o' steel an' the walls is lined with it. There's sheet-steel doors between the rooms what come down solid by pressin' a jigger somewheres. There's automatics an' sub-machine-guns, an' them babes know how to handle 'em. A bunch o' Chicago hoodlums stuck up Central Police Station in Chicago on account of—well, on account of a girl—an' got away with it—an' I'd jus' as soon take on that one as this one. You'll get all the scrap you'll want, Tommy boy—an' promise me you won't go yourself. W-will you?"

Tommy answered with silence. His answer was no.

Tom Persistent

"It's better'n even you'll get banged off, I'm tellin' you. I'm sorry now I tipped you at all—you're big an' brave an' strong, but you're no gangster. These are trained gunguys an' killers in their hearts—they're p'fessionals. Stay out of it an' let the men who do such things for a livin' do it. That's their business."

Tommy shook his head.

"I couldn't dog it that way. I just couldn't."

Tears sprang to his eyes.

"I won't let you. I won't let you get out o' my sight—out o' my arms. My God! I can't lose you now."

Tommy kissed her, and with gentle force disengaged her embrace.

"You'd better go home—to your hotel, honey," he said. "And we'd better not be seen together hereafter—outside, you know. You're in danger if Freeman gets the slightest suspicion, I realize that. So we'll make this room our meeting place hereafter and communicate by telephone otherwise. . . . I'll be very careful—don't worry—I have so much to live for since you come to me."

Annie protested no further. Men had always ruled her.

There was a slight flutter of agitation in the manner of Silk Freeman as he continually tapped the ash from his cigaret when his Hispano-Suiza took the corner easily at Eighth street and Fifth avenue. Silk was not his cool and collected self.

At the corner of Eighth street and Fifth avenue the car paused for just an instant and a little, blond man, bederbied and bespatted, quickly opened the door and bounced into the seat beside Silk. The later only grunted.

Freeman Angered

"Drive down Seventh avenue," Silk ordered his chauffeur, beside whom sat another man. These were his bodyguards, who never left him.

"It's that McClosky gang that got that dope!" he stormed. The little fellow shrunk back as though expecting a blow.

"They ain't so hard for a man like you to handle, eh?" he whined.

"Hard! There ain't nobody too hard for Silk to handle. Get that under your thick Scotch skull. That Cyclone Tim thinks he pulled a pretty one on the Big Boy. He's pulled the whole East River down over the heads of his lousy mob." Silk leaned forward and his cruel, steely gaze made the other wince. "Get me right. We're not givin' in. I've got the girl and I'll have the dope and I'll pin those flop ears of McClosky over my desk. I'll wreck Gillespie, and I'll serve him his punk son's heart for dessert. That Schuyder jane'll never look the same to her old man—if he ever sees her again."

The little shyster was trembling so that he could not raise his cigaret to his lips. In all his shady dealings with the Big Boy he had never seen him give way to anger like this before.

Silk tapped on his window and motioned to his chauffeur to stop. The car slid to the curb. It was a deserted block of darkened office buildings. Down on the corner was a little cigar store, which was open. Silk jumped out and the little lawyer followed. The chauffeur and his companion flanked the two as they walked down the street toward the store.

Silk glanced at his wrist watch. It was two minutes to 11.

"Now you got me straight—tell 'em flat," he cut off his words. The shyster made an inarticulate sound. He had not yet found his voice. Silk followed him into the store and held the door of the telephone booth slightly open as the other called the Schuyder home.

"Hello, came the thin, trembling voice of the lawyer. "Yes, it is. . . . But get this straight—the deal's off——"

Silk, whose sharp nails were biting into the palms of his clenched hands, fairly yanked the other from the booth and snatched up the receiver himself. His words came like the metallic staccato of a riveting machine.

Silk's Threat

"Listen flop-ears! You ain't ever goin' to make a pretty corpse. They'll have to bury you on the instalment plan. . . . You ain't afraid? . . . You know who's talkin'? Well, it ain't the guy you think it is. . . . I got the dame and I'll get the dope and I ain't singin' no song . . . Tell that guy Gillespie, he may as well fold up now, an' that Heinie Schuyder he'll see his daughter—in hell! . . . Ten o'clock tomorrow night—Tuesday night's the deadline. . . . I'm being soft an' givin' you one more chance——"

Silk threw the receiver at the hook, elbowed aside the shyster and tossed the fawning clerk a ten-spot as he strode out.

Cyclone Tim McClosky stood at the end of the bar in the Water street speakeasy and threw in a slug of the booze that burned a knot out of the wood wherever it slopped over the glass.

His cap was shoved far back on his massive head. He was in profound thought. He knew that Silk Freeman knew. And he knew that Silk Freeman was no pushover.

Tommy entered. Tim's eyes lit up. He loved that youngster. He saw at once that young Gillepsie had something momentous to say.

"I got to round up good men for dis job," observed the Cyclone. "An' we got to put on a spotter to office us when B. B. goes out—I don't want no pers'nal business wit' him at dis time. I ain't afraid o' him—you know dat. But if him an' me meet one of us has to croak. As it is, we might be able to stick dis joint up, grab the gal an' make a clean getaway. I don' wanna get you in no more gattin' than what's necessary, neither.

Tim Warns Tommy

"I got to get some tools, too. I got a pretty fair idea now how I'll op'rate. I've heard of them steel doors before. To batter 'em down would be a lot o' noise an' some neighbor'd holler copper. It's in a big flat buildin'. We got to work pretty quiet.

"This here Freeman's sorer'n a pup. Ev'ry step I take I'm lookin' for a machine to whizz past an' spray me wit' typewriter lead. If dat Dopey Benny knew where to find me, Silk knows, too. It's a cinch he's put me on de spot by now, anyway he put de finger on me . . . by de way, how about you? He'd frame you in a minute. Your ol' man tells me about some dame—what 'phoned. Who is she?"

"Oh, she's all right, Tim. A little secret—you know."

"No, I don' know. It'd be jus' like that buzzard to aim some good-lookin' chippy at you to get in wit you till you're off your nut over her an' trust her, an'—bam! You'll be lookin' in her eyes when you get it in your back."

Tommy blinked.

"You better go easy, kid. An' find out if she by any chance knows this here Big Boy."

Know him! She had been his woman! Still was in truth. She was at that moment sleeping in his suite in his hotel . . . but she had betrayed Silk to him, not him to Silk . . . yes, but wouldn't a woman who would double-cross one man double-cross another? Wasn't that the way these people of the underworld usually did their framing? Wasn't it possible that this whole labyrinthian runaround was "the spot?"

Couldn't it be that Freeman had kidnaped Alice, then sicked Annie on him to win him and to whisper to him where Alice was, knowing he would go to her rescue—and this walk into an ambush, where Freeman could kill him in his own home—and even justify himself by showing that Alice hadn't been there at all? True, Annie had begged him not to go. Mightn't she have figured he would surely insist on being in?

That "there is so much good in the worst of us and so much bad in the best of us" is an optimistic exaggeration.

But a really dangerous influence lies in the LITTLE good in the worst and the LITTLE bad in the best.

Children have left good homes and devoted parents because in some trivial matter these parents have been unreasonable.

A little too stinting in spending money. A little too strict about friends. A little too severe in scoldings for small mistakes.

The children then, finding in unworthy strangers a little generosity, a little sympathetic understanding and pleasant companionship, are blinded by this little good to greater faults in dangerous company.

Evil always baits the innocent with a little good.

Madge and Mary Scent Sinister Move in Veritzen Inviting Movie Star

At my question concerning Philip Veritzen Mary flung out her hand and caught mine tightly. That she had caught my meaning as well I realized when her words began to tumble out in excitement patently tinged with terror.

"Oh, I see what you mean," she said. "You think he's plotting to kidnap me, or something like that."

I was thankful that she had given my warning this fantastic interpretation, instead of the more sinister one which I had meant. It was not easy to explain to an unsophisticated young girl, for Mary is that, despite her adventure as the masked dancer, what I believed Philip Veritzen's inflamed, almost insane mind was plotting against her.

"He might be plotting almost anything," I rejoined evasively. "I do not believe he is quite sane just now. But whatever he is planning, nothing can touch you if you are always with me or—with Mrs. Underwood or Mrs. Bickett. One of us will always be at your service until this unpleasant activity of Mr. Veritzen's has spent itself."

"Well, just watch little Mary making a sticking plaster out of herself from now on," she rejoined, and her relieved tone told me that my assurance of protection had counteracted her fear of Noel's father, who was so determined to wreck the romance of the two young lovers.

"But how shall I act tonight?" she went on. "You know I can't see that old hyena without wanting to choke him, and he probably will highhat me so that it won't even be funny."

"I don't think he will, Mary," I said, with a conviction born of knowledge of my employers' idiosyncrasies. "Instead, he probably will be unusually attentive to you, and I want you to preserve the same pretty deference you have always given him. I know dear," as she winced, "it will be a terribly hard task for you, but there is no need to antagonize the man unnecessarily."

"I'll be good," she said, "for Noel's sake and for yours, but don't trust me near a carving knife."

I laughed, and after an instant she joined in my mirth. But she was silent all the rest of the way home, and I knew she was dreading the coming hours unspeakably.

But she was beautifully poised when upon our arrival at the hotel Mr. Underwood met us as the elevator stopped at our floor with the news that Mr. Veritzen already arrived.

"I've been on the lookout for you," he explained. "Gave Purnell the high sign to flash me when you came in the door and to hold the elevator until I got a chance to mosey out here. Thought you wouldn't like to breeze in on 'Is Royal 'Ighness unless you knew he was there."

"That was the time you thought aplenty, and then some," Mary told him saucily. "But how about it, Auntie Madge? Can't we go into your apartment first and fix up a bit? I'm a sight."

"You are—for tired eyes," Mr. Underwood assured her. "But you have something to primp for tonight. Old Phil has brought along the most be-yew-ti-ful young man I've seen in many a day. He's simply priceless."

"I'm sure I don't want to put any price on him," she retorted, but when we were safely inside our own apartment her insouciant manner dropped from her like a discarded cloak and she turned to me with anxious eyes.

"What do you suppose Mr. Veritzen means by bringing an extra man along?" she demanded.

"Probably some idea of balancing the party," I said with apparent nonchalance, although secretly I was as troubled as she was. "Otherwise there would have been three women and two men."

"Maybe so, maybe so," she retorted. "But I'm getting so I see something sinister in the way that old coyote laps his soup."

I laughed, and, crossing to the dressing table sat down before it.

"In the meantime, may I remind you that the old coyote is probably waiting for his dinner and therefore in a bad humor."

"He could starve for all I care," Mary muttered rebelliously, but she hurried into her own room and "primped" with such dispatch that we were at the door of the Underwood apartment within five minutes.

Harry Underwood opened the door at our knock, and I was conscious that two men were standing with their faces turned toward us. And then Mr. Veritzen, when he had greeted me warmly, was saying: 'Mrs. Graham, may I present Mr. Colin Cameron?"

I came near starting in undignified surprise. For standing before me was one of the movie heroes of Broadway.

Household Hints

Be sure to leave plenty of room for ventilation between lamp shades made of cloth or parchment and electric light bulbs.

Don't be governed by a passing fashion when curtaining a window. Decide on the draperies that show your home to best advantage.

Draped-back curtains are a wise choice if the room is gloomy or dark. In a room of this sort every speck of light should be encouraged.

Make delicious fruit butter by combining apple pulp with apricot, blueberry, grape, peach or plum. The apple pulp extends other fruits without materially affecting their color and flavor.

If you rinse a plate with cold water before breaking eggs on it, and then add a pinch of salt to the eggs and place them in a current of air, you will have no difficulty in beating them into a stiff froth.

Horoscopes

Sunday, November 23

Sunday's horoscope holds presage of fortunate and felicitous conditions for all ecclesiastical spiritual activities, with some substantial headway made in these connections. Sudden change may be involved, with new plans and projects, but these should be manipulated with discretion and proper premeditation.

Those whose birthday it is may be confronted by a year of entirely new projects and opportunities, with some prospects of unforeseen change, but these should not be too hastily embraced. Well directed, there are excellent promises for substantial connections, but be on guard against some elements of secrecy.

A child born on this day should be versatile and talented in the way of putting over large and strategic operations through shrewd and substantial manipulation. He should make a success in diplomatic affairs or with secret organizations or combines.

Monday, November 24

Monday's astrological chart is an intriguing one, with the baffling and mysterious planets in mutual aspect, a predicament fortified by the aspect of Uranus to the convertible Mercury. All are harbingers of change and variability, with the promise of unforeseen and precipitate events. While the opportunities are read as favorable, much depends on sagacity and wise manipulations.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of an intriguing and possibly adventurous year, with matters out of the ordinary uppermost. There are splendid opportunities, and well stimulated faculties for managing them, but much depends on the practical manner in which surprise and intrigue are manipulated. Personal affiliations should be particularly happy.

A child born on this day may be ingenious, adventurous, romantic and independent in thought and action, and may attain a place in the public regard, although possibly lacking in practical essentials.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Regularity in Eating Is a Good Habit.

So much has been written concerning constipation and so much advice given that I almost hesitate to write another article on this subject. But it is so important a subject that too much cannot be said regarding it.

DR. COPELAND

As a civilized nation we will always be confronted with the problem of constipation. Constipation is the result of bad habits. The only way to cure it is to teach the bowels new habit, a good habit.

Relief is promoted by eating at the same time each day, and having daily bowel movements at regular times. The use of drugs, particularly drastic cathartic, will never cure constipation. It will increase constipation, for the bowels will soon learn to depend entirely upon the drug for its action. After the long continued use of drugs, their effect is entirely lost.

Bowel movement should take place at a definite time each day. If there is but one, preferably this should be before the day's work has begun. Time and patience are required to teach the bowels to move regularly. This desirable habit is more difficult for an adult to acquire if for years he has depended entirely upon drugs.

In the training of children the importance of regularity of bowel movement cannot be over-emphasized. This good habit acquired in youth will be a blessing in later years.

Food and exercise are additional factors in prompting normal bowel movements. All fried foods should be avoided. Salted, smoked or pickled foods should be excluded from the diet.

A normal digestion will handle them, but if constipation is present avoid hot or fresh white bread. If it is not irritating, take instead whole wheat or bran bread.

All fruits are advisable. Avoid entirely the heavy and rich varieties of cheese, nuts, pastry, rich desserts, cakes and candy. Tea, alcoholic drinks, sweet or boiled whole milk, and chocolate should be entirely excluded from the diet.

Eat a good breakfast, including a large portion of coarse cereal without white sugar, or with a reasonable quantity of brown sugar. Before going to bed it is advisable to eat either figs, a dish of prunes or an apple. Always include a good assortment of fresh fruits and vegetables with your meals.

General exercise in the open is most beneficial for the relief of constipation. Such forms of sport as golf, tennis, horseback-riding and swimming are all strongly recommended. The most economical and often most beneficial form of exercise is walking. Walking helps the circulation, stimulates the appetite, improves digestion and aids intestinal action.

Never eat unless you are really hungry. It is best to leave the table still a bit hungry. Chew your foods slowly and well. Let your food be essentially wholesome but always of good materials, with plenty of vegetables and fresh fruits.

Drink plenty of water. I am more and more impressed with the thought that many of us fail to get sufficient liquids. It cannot be expected that the intestinal tract can function without fluids.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Joint Signature

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me the proper joint signature for a man and wife. While I realize this is a little used form, it is sometimes necessary and I would like to know if it should read "John and Mary Brown" or "Mary and John Brown?"

READER.

In this matter of the joint signature, there isn't any rule, and it is, as a matter of fact, not easy always to decide which name comes first. Usually the wife writes the card on which this double signature appears, and it is natural for the person who does the actual writing of the signature to feel that she (or he) should, for politeness' sake, write her (or his) name last. On the other hand, there is the natural thought that the woman's name should come first. For instance, in the signing of Christmas cards, the husband usually insists, that, even though the wife does the writing of the joint signature, she should write her name first.

There is no uniting these two points of view, and so, as we often jocularly say about the solution of this kind of thing—the "compromise" is to have the wife write her name first!

Assistant Hostesses

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A girl friend and I are planning to have a tea. We are both in high school. Will you please tell me in your column if we should have some of our friends pour, or should we ask our mothers to pour? Or could we have our mothers pour one hour and two friends the next?

YOUNG READERS.

I think that it would be much nicer for you two young hostesses to invite some of your friends to pour, and "save" your mothers to act as hostesses with you. The people who pour tea at a party usually are so busy with this duty that they haven't much time to give to "extending hospitality." Now it would be so much more charming if your mothers' time were free for this more important social function.

Buying the Trousseau

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me who is to buy the bride's clothes? Some say the groom and some say the girl's parents.

CONSTANT READER.

Never should the bride's costume be paid for by the groom. This is the height of bad form. The girl's parents pay for her bridal clothes and for her trousseau.

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

Are You Big Enough to Be Poor?

It is easy enough to be loving and loyal, when there's money to pad the hard places . . . but suppose the money goes? How fair and friendly will you be then?

The money all went—for Bettina. Left her and her husband stranded.

Many a time she'd had romantic dreams of being stranded with her lover on some desert isle . . . but a desert isle and a tropic moon are one thing, and a hall bedroom, with a wall bed and a busted chair are quite another! As she presently found. Did her love stand the test? Would yours have stood such a test? Do some honest thinking as you read:

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I've read that letter from Phil Allen, who wondered whether he had the right to 'ask a girl to share his poverty'—and I'd like to speak my piece.

"I've been through it all. I've had money and lost it. And I know how hard it is, when a typical, lively, gad-about American couple is deprived of outside interests, as you're bound to be when you lose your money. We think that we can 'live on love alone'—but when we have to do it, most of us get mighty crabby and unfair. That's the real test of love. And yet people can come through that test.

"My husband and I had plenty, to start with. We had everything that two people could want, and plenty of money to buy what we didn't have.

"Then we lost it all. Everything went. Books, music, art, sports, and with them, all our outside interests. Between us, we had left—good health, mutual respect and a very deep affection for each other, one room, with a dresser and a wall bed, two chairs and a bathroom.

"The thing that has pulled us through all this has been love and generosity. And mutual consideration. My husband felt sick at heart when I was deprived of the things I liked, though he has mentioned it only once or twice.

"I was sick at heart at his inability to save anything out of the wreck of 10 years' hard work. One is just as disappointed and at times feels just as disheartened as the other.

"Men, I think, are less inclined to speak of such things than women. But I don't think there is much difference in their feelings. And because I understand my husband, and sympathized with the way he felt, I tried to be just as brave about it as he has been. The result has been harmony between us, and our marriage still intact, in spite of everything.

"And I think that any marriage can keep on going strong, in spite of poverty. If the two people concerned will understand and sympathize with each other, instead of getting sarcastic and blaming each other when things are pinched a little.

"Don't forget, either, you girls who are 'ambitious,' that your husband is probably just as ambitious as you are. He wants to get ahead, so he can see his wife dressed as other women dress, and having the things she needs, plus luxury now and then. He's doing his best, and he can't do that best if he's constantly knocked off balance by nagging and fault-finding. In order to get along in the world, a man has to have harmony in his home and in his home life. He can't work well with jangled nerves. It'll be a real investment for you, if you'll try to give him that harmony.

"So praise him. Go along cheerfully beside him, with your own shoulder to the wheel. And don't murmur—if you love him. It will only put a crimp in his self-confidence and ability.

"And you men who aren't making much—don't forget that it gets tiresome to your wives to struggle every day of their lives to make ends meet. Give them their rightful praise. Appreciate their effort as you expect them to appreciate yours. If you love her, big boy, it won't be hard to smile, or even to laugh, when things go wrong.

"You'll both be recompensed beyond words, if you do.

"Being poor teaches us a saner use of money. It teaches self-discipline, self-effacement. When you've learned these things well, then you'll be ready for something better, and—you'll get it.

"The whole thing in a nutshell is, are you big enough to be poor? You know it takes so little effort to live finely and graciously and kindly, if you're rich. Can you do it—poor? Then the earth, and all its beauties, are yours!

"BETTINA."

Great stuff, Bettina!

No truer, braver letter was ever written.

If the average married man and woman used half of the sense and diplomacy and tact they'd use trying to get along with a business associate or a customer . . . the divorce court could go out of business.

That's just what one western woman did—How happy she is.

How would you like to lose a load of unhealthy fat that you don't need and don't want and at the same time feel better than you have for years?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent abdomen and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

How would you like to get your weight down to normal and at the same time develop that urge for activity that makes work a pleasure and also gain in ambition and keenness of mind?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get an 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts, which will last you for 4 weeks. Take one-half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning—eat what you need—take the exercise which Kruschen will induce—persist in this method every morning and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you can laugh at the people who pay hundreds of dollars to lose a few pounds of fat—now you will know the pleasant way to lose unsightly fat and you'll also know that the 6 vitalizing salts of Kruschen (Salts that your blood, nerves and glands must have to function properly)—have presented you with glorious health.

After that you'll want to walk around and say to your friends.—"One 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts is worth one hundred dollars of any fat person's money."

CONSTRUCTION OPERATIONS DECLINE

44 Pennsylvania Cities and Boroughs Report 46.3 Per Cent Decrease for October

HARRISBURG, Nov. 22—A decline of 46.3 per cent in building operations during October is shown in reports received by the Department of Labor and Industry from building inspection offices in 44 Pennsylvania cities and boroughs. Permits were issued during October for building construction work to cost $8,290,481, a decline of $7,137,389, or 46.3 per cent, as compared with permits for work costing $15,427,870 issued during October, 1929.

Only five cities reported increased building construction work for October over the same month last year, while 39 cities and boroughs show decreased construction work in comparison with October, 1929.

GAIN AT ERIE

The greatest gain during October was reported by Pottsville, an increase of $130,481, or 611.6 per cent, over its total for October, 1929. Erie reported an increase of $56,355, or 18.7 per cent, over the amount reported a year ago. Increased construction work was also reported by two additional cities and one borough—Berwick Borough, $8,895, or 562.9 per cent; Sunbury, $4,424, or 14.2 per cent, and Allentown, $1,728, or 0.7 per cent.

Building operations in Philadelphia during October declined $3,263,820, or 39.9 per cent, as compared with October, 1929. A decline of $1,241,589, or 60.6 per cent, occurred in Pittsburgh. Building construction work in Bethlehem dropped $441,510, or 97.6 per cent, during October, while Reading reported a loss of $381,304, or 63.3 per cent, as compared with the same month a year ago. Seven additional cities and one borough reported decreased building operations of more than $100,000 each.

BRAZIL COFFEE STOCKS UP

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Stocks of coffee in Sao Paulo interior warehouses and railways, including Minas Geraes as reported by the Institute de Cafe do Sao Paulo totaled 22,188,000 bags as of October 31, against 22,010,000 on September 30 and 17,158,000 at this time in 1929. With the exception of April 30, 1930, when stocks totaled 22,367,000 bags, prior to the recent $97,330,000 realization loan, which is aimed to dispose of 1,650,000 bags of surplus stocks in Brazil each year, the present accumulation is the largest on record.

While stocks are high at present, liquidation of enough coffee to meet interest and principal payments on the loan has been made. Present increasing stocks are due to the fact that the crop has been moving seaward from the interior for shipment.

WINDOW GLASS STOCKS LOW

Marketing conditions in the several branches of the flat glass industry held virtually without change the past week, according to American Glass Review. The better demand for window glass, evidenced earlier in the month, is being maintained, and the same may be said of rough rolled and wire glass products. Plate glass continues in slow movement with no improvement to be noted this week.

Current trade requirements for window glass, as for some weeks past, are more than sufficient to absorb output, owing to the present low rate of production. Stocks in the warehouses of manufacturers, as a consequence, are probably at the lowest point in recent years. Jobbers of window glass are and have been buying almost wholly for early or immediate needs. Their stocks are depleted and likewise at an unusually low level for this time of year.

With prospects favorable for a revival of building activities soon after the turn of the year, it would seem that the distributing trade must anticipate its requirements to an extent, at least, if orders are to be filled promptly and disappointments averted. Should anything closely approaching a normal seasonal demand develop, as pointed out recently by leading factors, the jobber who is not prepared will be the loser.

BANK DEBITS TAKE DROP

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Reports received during the past week completing a general survey of business conditions during the week ended November 15, show but slight difference from the preceding period. Bank debits outside New York City showed a falling off from the preceding week and were lower than the week ended November 16, 1929. Bank loans and discounts also showed fractional changes from comparative periods.

Prices for representative stocks and bonds were only slightly lowed than the preceding period. As compared with a similar week in 1929, bond prices were higher and stock prices lower. Call money remained unchanged when compared with the earlier week, while time rates declined. Both rates were considerably lower than the same week last year. Business failures as reported by R. G. Dun & Co. show that there were 495 defaulting firms during the week ended November 15, as compared with 489 during the previous week and 404 in 1929.

Wholesale prices, as indicated by the composite index of 120 commodities stood at the same level as the preceding week. However, increases were noted in the prices of cotton and copper while the price of wheat declined. All prices were considerably lower than a year ago.

Plan to Motorize N. Y. Railway System

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—City Omnibus Corporation, subsidiary of New York Railways Corporation, has filed with the board of estimate a supplement to its original application for franchises to operate buses on seven cross-town lines, asking that it be given franchises to operate nine more lines in the Borough of Manhattan. The plan amounts to motorization of the entire New York Railway system.

Increased Gross Shown In Power Field

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

THE ELECTRICAL UTILITY industry has not shown a single annual decline in gross revenue since its inception 48 years ago in spite of panics and depressions. This surprising fact has been made known in a survey of the industry compiled by G. E. Barrett & Co. Such a record is particularly impressive in view of the constant downward tendency of rates.

As near as the results of 1930 can be estimated, the present year will make no exception to the unbroken upward trend of the line of gross revenues in the power field. In 1929 gross approximated $2,000,000,000.

Domestic and small commercial users consume only a small part of the total output of electricity but they were responsible for maintaining the revenues of the power companies during the depressed periods when the needs of large industrial companies were curtailed.

Household Uses Gain

STEADY GROWTH IN the use of household appliances has been the savior of the record of the power companies during panic times. This has expanded their load with a class of business which is highly profitable.

In the first half of 1930, in the face of all the grief over the business situation, domestic consumption of electricity increased nearly 14 per cent over that of the same period of last year. To the operation of more appliances was added a greater number of domestic consumers. The industry secured 215,835 more users in this class during the first seven months of the year. With further development of the radio, electrical refrigeration, electric ranges and water heaters and the extension of service to the rural communities, the field for the expansion of this part of the industry is still vast.

Output Less

THE SURVEY POINTED out that actual production of electricity has sometimes been reduced in depression periods, but that this has not pulled down the gross revenue below the levels of preceding years. In 1921 production of electrical energy declined 6.5 per cent from the level of the preceding year. While revenues from industrial sources undoubtedly declined in line with this, the increases in domestic use more than made up for the lost gross income since power for use in homes carries a higher rate per kilowatt hour.

From 1921 down to 1929 each year has been marked by an increase in power output. The present year's output to date is practically equal to the corresponding period of 1929 in spite of the drop in industrial use. Since July 1, however, the rate of production has been below that of 1929, but gross revenues have continued to show monthly increases.

Of course there are individual companies which are reporting smaller gross figures than a year ago. The survey refers to the industry as a whole.

'Tickletoes' Distribution Commenced by Doll Lady

Dear Little Girls:

It is only a week ago that I started to write my daily letters. It was Tuesday before I had a chance to tell the little girls what I wanted them to do so they could get one of my loveable, wonder "Tickletoes" dollies. Well, let me tell the world, the little girls of Pittsburgh work fast. In my mail yesterday and today I found no less than 50 responses in which the girls had already completed what I asked them to do. And in a day or two these 50 girls will have a darling "Tickletoes" all for their very own.

You can see by this quick response that I didn't ask the little girls to do anything that would be really hard.

I'm still getting hundreds of letters and coupons and I am still ready to keep my part of the happy bargain. I'll give every little girl in Pittsburgh and vicinity a big "Tickletoes" dolly if each will send me a coupon and do what I ask her to do. With the help of mother and dad it will be easy to get a "Tickletoes" for yourself.

Anyway, if you send the coupon to me, I'll send you a set of colored pictures of my dolly which illustrates the many cute things she can do.

As I have told you before, she's a big dolly—within an inch or two of being as tall as this newspaper page is long. She has a radiant smile, laughing eyes, dimpled knees and is beautifully dressed in organdie. She is unbreakable, has rubber arms and legs and you can give her a bath just like a real baby. My "Tickletoes" has three voices. You hear one when you pinch her right knee, another when you squeeze her left knee and she cries when you lay her on her face, lay her on her back and she goes sound asleep. She can play with her toes and suck her thumb. In fact, you never loved any other dolly like you'll love "Tickletoes."

Here are the names of some of the little girls who have written to me during the last few days: Vivian Morrow, Alberta Smith, Jean Conboy, Margaret Baran, Dorothy Blackburn, Blanch Carr, LaVerne Spahr, Anna Raimond, Mary Byers, Thelma Hoppa, Hilda Weber, Iris Brennan, Yvonne Sleasman, Katherine Barbin and Betty Newell.

If you really want one of these wonder dollies, send the coupon to me today and you can easily have a "Tickletoes" before Christmas. Send your coupon to the

WAREHOUSE OF LAKE ERIE MODERN

Building on South Side Ranks Among Nation's Largest Storage Units

The Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad has erected, adjoining its passenger terminus on West Carson street, one of the largest and most complete warehouses in the country. This storage plant conducts service for goods received over the line of the P. & L. E. for the account of those desiring to avail themselves of it.

The central warehouse, which is the largest institution of its kind in Pittsburgh, has become the most popular warehouse in Pittsburgh for the storage of general merchandise, which accomplishment was made possible by the rendering of a character of service that fully measured up to the requirements of its patrons, coupled with low storage charges.

RECENTLY BUILT

The central warehouse is a mammoth structure of steel, concrete and brick, seven stories high, constructed from plans approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters. Built within the last few years, it embodies the most modern equipment and facilities for expeditious handling and safe and convenient storage of goods.

Its construction is fireproof throughout and additional protection against fire is afforded by a complete automatic sprinkler system, thereby insuring the lowest insurance rates for its patrons' goods.

HYDRAULIC LIFTS

Within the four walls are six storage floors, each comprising 60,000 square feet, divided into rooms, each containing 10,000 square feet and connected one with the other by firedoors; two basements with floor space aggregating 26,000 square feet of storage area, making a grand total of 386,000 square feet, the equivalent of 8½ acres.

The six floors above ground level are utilized for general storage and the sub-level floors for storing oil, tallow, grease, rope, inks, vinegar, sauer kraut, etc. In addition to the equipment already described, the warehouse is outfitted with seven five-ton hydraulic lifts with large platforms capable of handling automobiles, trucks and articles for a storage to a length of 25 feet.

POWER OUTPUT TAKES SLUMP

Production of electricity by the electric light and power industry of the United States for the week ended Saturday, November 15, was 1,718,137,000 kilowatt hours, against 1,731,298,000 in preceding week and 1,810,010,000 in like 1929 week, according to the National Electric Light Association. This is 5.1 per cent below the figure for the corresponding week of 1929, but 0.7 per cent above the figure of 1929.

The Atlantic seaboard continues to register an increase in electrical output over last year, being 0.8 per cent above the corresponding week of 1929. The great central industrial region, outlined by Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Milwaukee, shows, as a whole, a decrease in electrical output of 7.1 per cent below last year, while the Pacific Coast shows an increase of 0.5 per cent.

Record Freight Speed Average Established

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The average speed of freight trains for the first nine months this year was the highest for any corresponding period on record, amounting to an average of 13.7 miles per hour, according to reports just filed by the rail carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics.

This represents the average per hour for all freight trains between terminals, including yard and road delays, no matter from what cause.

The average speed for the nine months period was an increase of six-tenths of one mile above that for the same period last year. The average speed of 13.7 miles per hour for September was also the highest for any September on record.

TREND LACKING IN STEEL TRADE

Only Seasonal Increase In Tonnage Expected After Turn of Year

By B. E. V. LUTY.

The Steel market is dragging along with no general trend as to either volume or prices. Nothing occurs that would furnish an augury of any substantial change in the next few months. Accordingly seasonal increase in tonnage, but only seasonal increase may be expected immediately after the turn of the year, extending into March or April, and prices are likely to hold at around their present levels.

All estimates this week were that there was no material change in the general rate of steel production from last week. The chances are there was a slight decrease. At long range this is favorable, for some little seasonal decrease would be expected and the general trend had been downward since February. The common appraisal is that stocks of steel and manufactures of steel have been reduced so rigidly that the usual year-end decrease in shipping instructions to mills will be largely or wholly avoided. However, buyers have often surprised mills both pleasantly and unpleasantly.

1931 OUTLOOK DIM

Guesses are already being sought as to what next year as a whole will be like in steel. Comparison with this year is obviously impossible for in tonnage this year was far from homogeneous while in prices it has had such declines that the performance cannot be repeated. Steel ingot production in the first half of the year was slightly over 24,000,000 tons, while the second half can scarcely total 16,000,000 tons. It looks like a perfectly safe guess that next year will average under this year's first half rate and above its second half rate.

The average of finished steel prices has sagged almost continuously, rails alone escaping a decline. Nails, sheets and strips are in general unprofitable, while other lines generally are at prices representing a profit if costs are not too much increased by light operating rates.

Of late there has been much talk of stabilizing steel prices, some of it rather loose, by products having widely different marketing conditions being grouped more or less together. It was early in September that talk began about stabilizing prices on bars, shapes and plates, and eventually conditions became ripe for the announcement the Carnegie Steel Company made on November 10, that its minimum on the three products was 1.60c. The price is not held open for first quarter contracts.

TRUCKING FIRM FINISHES JOB

Lafferty Brothers have just completed a contract for hauling 1,000,000 cubic yards of dirt from excavations made for the approaches to the new Westinghouse Memorial Bridge.

In carrying out the work 40 heavy duty International dump trucks were used. Of these, 20 are owned and are in the organization's permanent fleet.

Within the short space of five years Lafferty Brothers have developed their business so rapidly that they are now among the outstanding operators of truck fleets of this type in the Pittsburgh district.

September Freight Traffic Volume Off

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The volume of freight traffic handled by the Class I railroads of this country in September this year amounted to 36,219,944,000 net ton miles, according to reports just received from the railroads by the Bureau of Railway Economics.

Compared with September, 1929, this was a reduction of 8,002,066,000 net ton miles or 18.1 per cent, and a reduction of 7,571,395,000 net ton miles or 17.3 per cent under September, 1928.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

Paying Extra Dividends Is Helping Trade

By B. C. FORBES

CHRISTMAS TRADE will be helped by the payment of not a few extra dividends next month. This column recently recommended such action by all corporations financially able to do so.

Stockholders are no longer confined to wealthy men and women. Three out of every five families in America now own stocks — and, as a matter of fact, there has been a notable increase in the total during the current year. Therefore, when extra dividends are distributed, they reach a large number of pockets, many of them of only modest means.

Mr. Forbes.

Payment of extra Christmas dividends cannot fail to encourage buying. That is what is needed more than anything else at this time. Stagnation can be cured only by activity, by demand. Demand is much more likely to be stimulated by paying out dividends than by keeping the money in needlessly large corporate reserves.

Among corporations that have recently taken more generous dividend action are:

Coca-Cola Bottling, 10 per cent stock; Sears-Roebuck, 1 per cent stock; Eastman Kodak 75-cents extra; United Biscuit, increase from 40 cents to 50 cents quarterly; National Dairy Products, increase from 50 cents to 65 cents quarterly; Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific, $50 extra; United States Gypsum, 50 cents extra; American Power and Light, 10 per cent stock extra; Atlantic Refining, 25 cents extra; Jewel Tea, $1 extra; Great Northern Iron Ore, 50 cents extra; Chicago Rivet and Machine, 50 cents extra; Sherwin-Williams, of Canada, 5 cents extra; Universal Trust Shares, 30 cents initial, 34 cents extra; Chicago Great Western Railway, first preferred dividend ($1) since 1919; North American Securities, ½ per cent special in stock; American Cash Credit Corporation, 15 cents extra; Essex, $2 extra; South Bend Bait, 4 per cent extra; Manhattan Fire and Marine Insurance, 25 per cent stock; McWilliams Dredging, 100 per cent stock; Allegheny Steel, 25 cents extra; Package Machine, $1 extra; City Investing, 33 1-3 per cent stock; Standard Oil of Kentucky, 20 cents extra; F. & W. Grand-Silver Stores, 1 per cent extra; Alabama Great Southern, $7.50 extra on common and preferred; Atlantic Coast Line, $1.50 extra; Commercial Investment Trust, 1½ per cent special in stock; Mayflower Associates, 1 per cent special; Cheseborough, $1 extra, and D. Appleton, 1 per cent extra.

President A. P. Sloan, of General Motors, announcing the payment of the full regular dividend, made this sensible statement to stockholders:

"In periods of subnormal industrial activity a dividend disbursement representing a percentage of total earnings higher than usual is entirely proper."

This is the ideal time for wealthy corporations and wealthy individuals to exercise liberality, not niggardliness.

THAT TIMID MERCHANTS were running the risk of being unable to get pre-Christmas stocks at any moment and in any quantity desired was emphasized in this column. Read these statements by Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn, top-notch advertising agency:

"One big store has $190,000 less stock than a year ago. Several of the buyers have just returned from New York and report a dangerous shortage of good merchandise available for immediate shipment. The president said, 'I am worried. I fear we have missed the boat. It is going to be a scramble to get Christmas merchandise.'

"Another store put on a sale of handbags. The stock on hand was quickly exhausted and they wired for more. Never before have they failed to get all the bags they wanted by express next day. The maker wired it would take from three weeks to a month to make delivery.

"The president of a third store said, 'Today we cannot get common, ordinary cotton sheets for immediate delivery, a condition which has never before existed in the retail business.'

"One of the important New York department stores held the biggest summer fur sale in its history last August. It bought sparingly for summer in general merchandise, went back for more, couldn't get any, and had to get in fall goods early, in order to have anything to sell."

Let these warnings sink in.

THE MOST IMPRESSIVE annual gathering of business men in New York is the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York. The one hundred and sixty-second banquet, held this week was far from a depressing affair. I talked with many responsible members and found that, on the whole, a somewhat better feeling has been created by events of the last few weeks. Many concerns are now doing a little better. Also, inquiries for future deliveries are more encouraging.

When Sir Harry G. Armstrong, retiring British consul general, sketched the New York he came to 40 years ago and contrasted it with the New York of today, it was impossible to harbor doubts concerning this nation's future. Too many of us have let our minds go back only to 1929. Try looking ahead to 1939. Then, if you know anything of America's history, you can't possibly remain pessimistic.

This country's best days don't lie behind; they lie ahead.

PRESIDENT WYLIE HEMPHILL of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce wires:

"Seven hundred business men, at a 'challenge dinner,' decided to add 100,000 to Seattle's national advistising program for 1931."

Is Seattle downhearted? No!

Seattle's example is recommended to the business men of other cities.

Any mugwump can surrender. Now's the time to fight.

HOLIDAY MAIL CALL ISSUED

T. G. Cruse, superintendent of mails in the Pittsburgh postoffice, has sent out a bulletin showing the last date on which Christmas mail may be started to foreign countries and U. S. possessions to insure delivery before December 25. The bulletin points out that delivery of parcels to foreign destinations often is held up by customs inspection.

While the dates given practically insure delivery in time for Christmas, Mr. Cruse urges the public to mail earlier than the deadline date to avoid congestion that always occurs at the holiday period.

Some of the more important points named in the list, and the last day for mailing, are:

November 21, Australia, South Africa and Syria; November 30, Egypt, the Guianas, Turkey and Russia; December 1, Brazil and Argentina; December 5, Canal Zone; December 8, Czechoslavia, Hungary, Norway, Peru, Poland, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Yugoslavia; December 11, England, Scotland, Ireland, Netherlands, Jamaica and Nicaragua.

Bankers Awarded Detroit Bond Issue

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Guaranty-Lehman Brothers group was awarded $19,692,000 Detroit 4¼ per cent and 4½ per cent bonds, due 1931 to 1960 on bid of 100.24 for $15,000,000 4½ and $4,692,000 4¼.

COUNTY BRIDGE PROGRAM HEAVY

13 Major River Bridges, Costing $30,000,000, Included on List

By JAMES R. SANSOME, Secretary, Allegheny County Planning Commission.

No achievement of Allegheny County's progressive board of County Commissioners has been more creditable to them or more essential to the growth of the county than the great bridge building and reconstruction program which they are now carrying to a successful conclusion. In all, the county has constructed in the past seven years or is now working on 13 major river bridges which cost over $30,000,000 including the West End, Manchester, McKees Rocks and Woods Run spans over the Ohio River.

Other major brides include the great Liberty Bridge which gives access from the city to the Liberty Tubes, the new Point Bridge, McKeesport-Duquesne Bridge and the Glassport Bridge over the Monongahela River and the Sixth, Seventh, Ninth and Thirty-first street, Washington Crossing and New Kensington bridges over the Allegheny River, and the Coraopolis Bridge over the back channel of the Ohio River.

In addition to these are 15 other major bridge projects including the two great viaducts, one at Turtle Creek on the Lincoln Highway and the Westinghouse Bridge at East Pittsburgh spanning the Turtle Creek Valley, the Boston Bridge over the Youghiogheny, the Charles Street Bridge and the John P. Moore Memorial Bridge, connecting important sections of the city, the high bridge on California avenue, the great viaduct over Thompson's Run valley into the city of Duquesne, the splendid group of iron and concrete bridges over Chartiers Creek headed by the fine Thornburg structure, and more than 45 smaller bridges along the various county highways not including numerous viaducts along the routes of the Ohio River boulevard and the Allegheny River boulevard.

The bureau of bridges has the entire burden of maintaining and keeping in repair all of the 390 bridges of the county, of which 32 span the three great rivers, 20 are multi-span structures over the larger creeks or are viaducts over large hollows, 210 are single span metal bridges and 118 are single span masonry or concrete structures. The executive head of the bridge bureau is V. R. Covell, who has a principal assistant engineer as his aide, and a chief clerk in charge of the office division.

FALL SOCIALIST MEET SUNDAY

Members from Philadelphia, Reading and Greensburg will attend the annual fall meeting of the Socialist party of Pennsylvania, in the party's offices, Lyceum Building, at 11 a. m. tomorrow. Besides receiving the report of the state secretary on the conduct and results of the recent campaign, it will be necessary for the committee to enunciate party policy and program as regards action of the Pennsylvania General Assembly.

The Socialist party is committed to an unemployment relief program of a tri-partite nature involving unemployment insurance, old age pensions and abolition of child labor. Some means of legal reduction of hours will be discussed. The party proposes the abolition of coal and iron (industrial) police and the state constabulary, the repeal of the Flynn anti-sedition act, restriction of the use of the injunction in labor disputes, and the incorporation of the "company town."

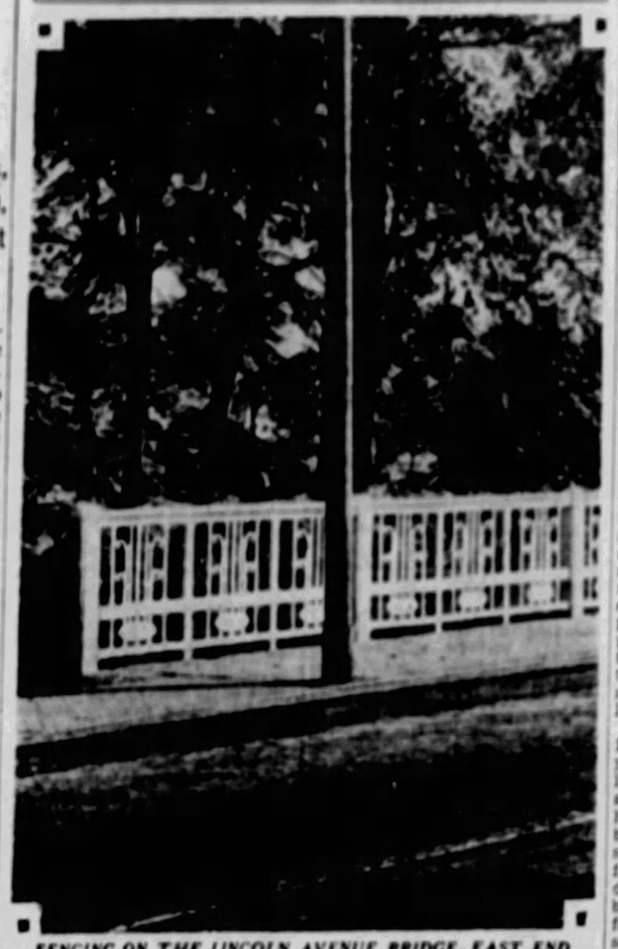
WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Concerted national effort to accelerate construction bore its greatest results during the first half of the present year and has now practically spent its force as a factor in sustaining construction activity, according to the Constructor, official publication of the Associated General Contractors of America.

The total volume of construction contract awards for the 10 months ending with October, as compiled from reports of the F. W. Dodge Corporation, showed a decline of slightly more than 20 per cent as compared with the same period of 1929, whereas for the first six months the decline was only 12⅓ per cent. Trends shown in the charts indicate that unless there is a renewed intensification of acceleration the percentage of decline for the year will be at least twice as large as for the six months' period, officials of the Associated General Contractors state.

The Constructor's charts show that the volume of construction performed during October, as indicated by shipments of basic construction materials, declined 13 points from the September figure to index number 186, its lowest point since last May.

IRON SAFETY RAILINGS



FENCING ON THE LINCOLN AVENUE BRIDGE, EAST END

HUNTER GETS RAIL ORDER

Beauty has been combined with genuine safety in 20,000 feet of the recently ordered Hunter safety railing, a large share of which is being supplied to Allegheny County for use on bridges here.

In place of the light fencing which offers no protection against an automobile swerving from the road, the new railing has an extra horizontal member at a height which enables it to directly take up the shock from a bumper or wheel or a car. Heavy malleable iron posts, which are firmly anchored to the bridge, support each panel of the railing. The horizontal members are designed so that they form a continuous cable which will distribute the force of a shock over the entire structure.

Real Estate

Robert W. Sample and others have deeded to Allegheny County for a $70,087 consideration approximately 211 acres of ground in Hampton Township, near the Wildwood Country Club.

William J. McSorley has sold to Veronica A. Kirk, 50x140 feet in Orchard avenue, Bellevue, for a private consideration.

A brick dwelling and garage at 5554 Darlington road has been sold to Louis P. Burdman by the Dollar Savings Bank. No consideration was named.

A decline of 46 per cent in building operations during October is shown in reports received by the Department of Labor and Industry from building inspection offices in 44 Pennsylvania cities and boroughs.

The Board of Education has made application for a building permit to erect a school at Frankstown and Lincoln avenues. The cost of construction is placed at $205,000.

Building permit applications follow:

Thirty-first Ward — Duquesne Light Company, brick building, Baldwin street, $18,000.

Twentieth Ward—R. E. Williams, concrete block garage, 3001 Glen Mawr avenue, $1,000. J. Novak, brick service station, 2725 West Carson street, $1,000.

BUSINESS INDEX TAKES DROP

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The visibility is very low and does not increase as week by week we come nearer the veil that seems to shut off a clear view of 1931 prospects in business, commodity or security markets, says the Business Week in its report covering the week ending today. A haze of uncertainty hangs over the efforts being made to stabilize commodity prices and to secure effective international financial co-operation toward restoring confidence in long-term investment.

Steady vision is disturbed by the continued decline in indicators of business activity as we drift through the lag end of a poor year. The index dropped off further, from 79.5 to 78.2 per cent of normal for the week ended November 15, though the declining tendency is not as uniform as it has been in recent weeks. In the same week a year ago, the index stood at 101.3 per cent.

Steel and building are not giving way to the usual year end slump as rapidly as might be expected. Concerted resistance to further deflation of copper, iron and steel, wheat and sugar prices is a justifiable experiment, but the outcome is doubtful. Better buying of bonds by banks and apparent accumulation of cheap stocks by large interests are further hopeful signs of stabilization in financial markets, though Wall street is not yet ready to discount 1931 business improvement.

100,000 VIEW ART EXHIBIT

Attendance of visitors to the Twenty-ninth International Exhibition has now passed the 100,000 mark. This is 9,000 more than the number of visitors at the same time last year. And there are still two weeks before the closing date.

Monday night, Miss Dorothy Adlow, of Boston, will give the last of the series of evening lectures on the International for this season.

The exhibition will continue until December 7, thus giving the public an opportunity to return to view the popular prize painting.

LITTLE CHANGE IN LOCAL TRADE

Mild Temperatures Cause Spotty Retail Sales; Holiday Buying Starts

This week has shown comparatively little change in the general business situation, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. Retail trade has been somewhat spotty due to mild temperatures, although holiday buying has started to some extent. Jobbers report buying comparatively light, although numerous small orders are being received for filling in purposes. It is the general impression that stocks of merchandise of retailers average considerably below normal and jobbers stocks are also reported lower than usual. Sales of men's and women's wearing apparel continue rather light and prices are also somewhat lower than they were last year at this time, so that the total volume of sales appears to be averaging lower than for several years.

Shoe sales this fall have been 10 to 15 per cent lower than last year at this time, partly due to lower prices and to the decline in advance orders. Thus far, there has been very little buying of rubber footwear. There has been a slight improvement in the demand for jewelry, particularly of medium grades and novelties, but business is not up to normal. Confectionery manufacturers report some improvement in demand, although the volume of sales is below the same period of last year.

CRUDE OIL PRICE CUT

Demand for plumbing supplies is light, but movement of heating equipment is at a slightly higher rate. The demand for electrical equipment continues slow, while radio equipment is slightly more active, although below the same period of last year.

A further reduction is noted in the production of crude oil, while demand for refined products is also decreasing, and prices are showing a downward tendency. Prices paid for Pennsylvania crude oil were again reduced last week by 15 cents per barrel, and this price is the lowest since November, 1915. A further effort to curtail production in Pennsylvania is expected to be made in the near future. While a slightly better demand for bituminous coal is noted for domestic purposes, industrial demand continues light and production has fallen off slightly.

A few reports indicate a slight improvement in collections, but majority of the jobbers interviewed report payments still averaging slow and unsatisfactory.

BETTER LIVING SEEN AID TO PROSPERITY

Julius H. Barnes Thinks Future Trade Depends On Higher Standard

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, in pointing to the road to better times, takes the view that the prosperity of the future will come from bringing to larger numbers at home and abroad the benefits of modern American living standards.

Mr. Rukeyser

Mr. Barnes, in Nation's Business, says:

"History and human psychology should teach us that, fast or slow, the sixteen hundred million humans existing between these disparities on the scale of living standards will advance along the trail that America has blazed.

WANTS WILL EXPAND

"We know that wants will expand, that possessions and wealth will increase, that trade will grow on orderly development and earning power. We know that the production of hours now idle will create earning power and swell the aggregate of trade along the currents of the world, that more goods will seep by their pressure into more and more homes.

"These forces will set in motion under the urge of individual gains. These forces will seek those fields in which there is the freest play for that most proper human ambition—fields in which three basic requirements are most evident:

"First, natural resources from which things of use are made; second, habits of industry to convert those things into use; third, stable and sound government, under which these forces can operate."

RAILROADS HELP

Railway executives of the country have done more than their share toward mitigating the ravages of the business depression. They went ahead this year on a vast developmental program, adding to opportunities for employment, at a great cost to the immediate profit positions of the railroads themselves, and at a recent meeting in New York, they have agreed to go ahead again in 1931, to the utmost of their resources, aiming to avoid contributing unnecessarily to the vicious circle of depression.

Some exceptional, well-managed companies have been able to report larger net profits this year than last. One of these is the Hershey Chocolate Corporation. William F. R. Murrie, president of the corporation, in telling me how he had turned the trick, said: "The gain in the earnings was accomplished through operating economies and lower prices of the raw materials used in our products. The loss in net sales was caused partly by the general business depression and partly due to the abnormal spell of hot weather this year."

Receipts also were heavy, amounting to 54,000 tons, and stocks at Cuban ports now total about 987,000 tons.

Food and Clothing Prices Cut in Rome

ROME, Nov. 22.—The recent clash in government salaries has been followed by reductions of from 6 to 8 per cent in the retail price of food and clothing.

While the prices of raw material and basic manufactured articles have remained unchanged, it is generally believed they also will start a downward trend. No official order has been issued, but it is generally known the government desires to reduce the cost of living and retailers have been quick to read the handwriting on the commercial wall.

GREAT WESTERN SUGAR LIFTS OUTPUT

Production This Year Is Million Bags Above 1929; Earnings Cover Dividends

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—Sugar production by Great Western Sugar Company in the current year probably will closely approximate 10,300,000 bags, an increase of more than 1,000,000 bags over the year ended February 28, 1930. The company's production record total was 10,517,370 bags, and was established in the 1927-1928 fiscal year.

It has entirely disposed of sugar produced from the 1929 beet crop and has sold more than 1,000,000 bags from the current year's crop. Indications are that before the company closes its fiscal year on February 28 next, it will have sold 3,000,000 bags of the present crop.

REFINED SUGAR LOW

The low price for refined sugar indicates that the price of beets probably will be reduced next year. In the last few years, Great Western has contracted beets at $7 a ton in the Colorado and Nebraska districts and $7.50 a ton in the Montana and Northern Wyoming districts.

Earnings in the current year, based on present prices, probably will show slightly more than preferred dividends covered. The company's finances are in strong position, however, with a good-sized cash balance. As of February 28, last, the ratio of current assets to current liabilities was better than 6 to 1.

AVERAGE EARNINGS

Great Western's earnings over rather wide fluctuations, ranging from $3,365,713 in the year ended February 28, 1927, to $7,785,699 in the 12 months ended February 28, 1929. The company's record for net income was established in the year ended February 28, 1924, when $12,004,303 was earned, equal to $18.25 a share on 600,000 shares of common stock then issued.

The average annual net income in the last five years was $5,383,277, after charges, equal to $2.40 a share on the 1,600,000 shares of common stock now outstanding, allowance being made for dividends on preferred stock.

THE PRODUCE MARKET

The demand for fruit and vegetables was dull today at the wholesale produce markets in Pittsburgh. There were no changes in quotations.

The poultry markets rested firm, demand fair, supply nominal with slight changes in quotations.

The butter, egg and cheese markets remained steady, demand good, supply adequate with slight changes in butter quotations.

Car lot supplies were average with 383 cars on track. Arrivals included 5 cars of apples, 3 beans, 1 cabbage, 4 cauliflower, 3 celery, 3 grapefruit, 20 grapes, 1 lemons, 6 lettuce, 2 onions, 8 oranges, 2 pears, 1 peppers, 11 potatoes, 1 sweet potatoes and 2 tomatoes.

PENNA. CRUDE OUTPUT CUT

The conservation board of the Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil Association has decided to revert to the previous rate of production curtailment. Production curtailment was modified in September in anticipation of a greater demand which did not materialize.

Operators in the Bradford-Allegheny district will be restricted to 50 per cent, and in all other sections of Pennsylvania grade producing territory, including parts of Ohio and West Virginia, a 30 per cent curtailment will take effect immediately.

Indicated present daily production of Pennsylvania crude is 63,000 barrels, and it is hoped to reduce this to 57,000 barrels.

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 22.—The Texas State Proration Advisory Committee has fixed oil output for the ensuing 60 days at 681,538 barrels, against 750,000 barrels allocated three months ago, but with output actually totaling 736,850 barrels.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Export gasoline prices have declined rapidly since withdrawal of the Export Petroleum Association. United States motor gasoline sold at 6½ cents and is quoted at 6¼ cents, compared with the association's price of 6¾ to 7½ cents on November 7.

HARVEY ARRANGES PROGRAM FOR FAR NORTH

The Loudspeaker

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The most dismal of days outside, Sunday has become the most attractive within doors. A bow, my comrades, to the mahatmas of the microphone. What matters it if the rain falls with a persistence that would do credit to a Somerset Maugham novel when, adjusting the cushions in the arm chair, one can turn the dials to a succession of great orchestras, world-famous pianists and violinists and vocalists?

* * *

Beginning early in the afternoon and continuing until late at night the broadcasters last Sunday showed their most brilliant musical wares. And the weather was on their side. It compelled people to cup their ears to the music of the radio set—music as brought forth by Toscanini and his Philharmonic band, Stokowski and his Philadelphia musicians, Hadley and his Manhattan Orchestra, Roxy and his symphonic fiddlers, Josef Hoffman, the foremost pianist yet to face a microphone; Toscha Seidel, expert on the violin.

Sunday Brings Best Of Musical Broadcasts

The best of the orchestral programs was that of the Philadelphia band, chiefly because it was designed expressly for radio and because it was comprised exclusively of the glowing climaxes which Richard Wagner composed for his Niebelungen Ring.

* * *

Musically, the highlight of the day, however, was the second radio recital of Hofmann. His program was not as definitely highbrow as that of his microphonic debut last season. He chose a movement of a Rubenstein symphony and two fairly familiar selections of Chopin, all of which permitted his fingers to ripple superbly over the keyboard.

* * *

With recitals coming in quick succession from the foremost bands and concert artists, America is now absorbing more musical culture than in all the years of

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Ed Harvey, whose ability as a production man was well demonstrated in his Armistice Day program over KDKA, comes to the air tonight at 11:15 with a special feature for dwellers of the Far North. Harvey, who is of the NBC school in Chicago, has a unique way of staging radio presentations. They are animated and colorful. We recommend his offering for late armchair listeners.

* * *

Harvey's versatility was displayed one night this week when he sang the signature song on Fleetwing Parade immediately after concluding a Negro characterization in another studio.

* * *

Harvey was born in Winchester, Ky., and educated at St. Manlius Military Academy, Columbia University and Canadian Army. He has trouped with many circuits and for some time was with the Universal Film Company.

QUESTION A DAY:

Answer—Paul Dumont, one of the end men, who is at other times an announcer and production man. He's a radio veteran, too.

It seems there's no limit to the repertoire of Jessica Dragonette . . . . Her singing of "None But the Lonely Heart" last night revealed exceptional artistry . . . . It's a favorite of the famous conductor . . . . Captain Frank Hawks, speed king of the air, is to tell how he does it on WCAE December 10 . . . Art Gorman, former radio writer, gives an intelligent and comprehensive outline of what's doing in the amusement world over KDKA every afternoon . . . . William C. Munday, NBC gridiron voice, is known to his friends in Atlanta as "Bullet Bill," because of his rapid delivery.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

Don't Jolly Bill and Jane make you feel like children again? We listen to them every morning we are up that early and hardly fail to hear that last tingle of the school bell summoning Jane to her studies. Jane is Muriel Harbster, who celebrated her twelfth birthday recently by traveling over New York in an airplane by night "when the city looked like a huge blanket of blinking lights."

Jane says:

"It was the most fun I've ever had."

The Emerson telephone exchange in East Liberty will be placed on a dial basis at midnight, William Bradford, division manager of the Bell Telephone Company, announced. KQV RELIEVED OF TIME LIMIT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The Federal Radio Commission has authorized KQV, Pittsburgh, to increase its hours on the air by relieving it from its present daylight time-sharing with WSMK, Dayton. The Pittsburgh station with 500 watts and the Dayton station with 200 watts were authorized to operate simultaneously on their mutual wave-length of 1,380 kilocycles during daylight hours, but were instructed to share time equally at night because of the greater likelihood of mutual interference after dark.

The commission also authorized KDKA to continue until January 31, 1931, the present synchronized operation of its old and new transmitters.

BOYS RETRACT GUNMAN STORY

After telling police they were victims of a Negro gunman, two boys retracted their story, detectives said, and admitted they shot themselves accidentally Wednesday night.

Raymond Boccardi, 12, of Gilmore way, wounded in the left arm, told detectives, they said, that he and Joseph Spagnoletti, 13, of Gilmore way, were shooting at cans in Bedford avenue. While he was holding the revolver it discharged and the bullet passed through his hand and lodged in Spagnoletti's shoulder.

Local Grid Graduations. Many Careers Ending. Three Teams Hit Hard.

Tobin Raps Night Ball. Clairton's Great Record. A's Ask Fat Salaries.

MORE THAN 30 PLAYERS TO BE LOST

MANY A FAMILIAR face will be missing from the collegiate football picture in Pittsburgh when another season rolls around. All three of the local teams are to be hit so hard by graduation that they will hardly be recognizable when they take the field for their first games in 1931. More than 30 cleated athletes on the rosters of Pitt, Carnegie Tech and Duquesne will wind up their college gridiron careers with the playing of next week's games, the list including some of the most brilliant stars in this part of the country.

John Highberger

The loss of standouts will be felt by all of the home schools in both the line and the backfield. Each team will be deprived of the services of prominent regulars who have been classed as its main dependables, and the task of filling the resulting holes threatens to give plenty of trouble to the respective coaches. This applies particularly to Wally Steffen and Bob Waddell at Carnegie and to Elmer Layden at Duquesne. Both of those institutions will lose so much first-string material that little more than a memory will remain of the outfits that have worn their colors during the present campaign.

FIVE OF THE seven forwards and half of the regular backfield will be wiped out at Carnegie. John Highberger, the Plaid's fine tackle, than whom they don't come much better, is to pass from the line, and with him will go not only John Dreshar, two-time captain, and the giant Leonard Schnupp, but also both of the regular ends, the brilliant Ted Rosenzweig and his terminal mate, Latham Flanagan, together with a substitute guard in the person of Clarence Krack.

Two of the star backfield regulars will be lost in the departure of John Karcis, powerful fullback, and Howard Eyth, a ball carrier with few superiors among the halfbacks in the game. Joe Morbito, substitute fullback, also is to go, as well as Halfback Thayer Flanagan and one of the reserves at that position, Oscar Carlson. There is a probability, too, that Hyman Goldberg, one of the quarterbacks, will not return to school.

THE DUKES WILL be hit even harder, both as to number of regulars graduating and total number of players lost. Of his first team, Coach Layden will have only three members back in school next fall, and of his squad as a whole he will lose no fewer than 14 members.

The entire regular backfield will pass out. With Kass Kovalcheck, who succeeded Buff Donnelli at fullback this year, will go Doggo Burns and Co-Capt. Ganzy Benedict, crack halfbacks, and Joe McCarthy, who has played quarter, half and full. Ted Todd and Pat O'Toole are additional backfield men who will depart.

Kass Kovalcheck

DUQUESNE'S LOSSES IN the line will be headed by John Clark, the capable guard, who has shared the captaincy with Benedict in the first local trial of the twin leadership system. Ray Kemp, crack tackle, also will be lost, along with Sammy Pratt, whose end play long has been a regular feature of Duke games. Two good centers will be added to the list in Pat Lally and Maisch Silverstein, and they will be accompanied by Richard Kelleher and Tom Kirby, tackles, and Charley Wynoski, guard.

Pitt will not lose as many high-grade regulars as it parted with at the close of last season, when Toby Uansa, Joe Donchess, Ray Montgomery, Tom Parkinson, Al DiMeolo, Jimmy Rooney, Charley Edwards and others reached the end of their playing days, yet a big hole will be knocked in their forces.

The heaviest loss will be suffered in the going out of Eddie Baker, captain and quarterback. Eddie has been the individual star of the team this year, proving one of the greatest quarterbacks the Panthers ever had, and if he had had one of Pitt's powerful teams of other seasons to work with he would have been talked about all over the country.

BAKER WILL TAKE out with him a complete backfield, as among the others passing at the same time will be Franklin Hood, plunging fullback and one of the longest forward passers in the sport; Josh Williams and Bill Walinchus, halfbacks, and Harry Wagner, second-string quarterback.

From the line will go Charley Tully and Ernie Lewis, regular

WESTINGHOUSE COPS CITY GRID TITLE

Westinghouse High School nailed the city championship to the mast overlooking Silver Lake today, the Burton-coached eleven yesterday defeating South Hills High in the final of the elimination series, 12 to 6, at the Stadium. Approximately 6,000 fans watched the battle.

It is the fourth time the Blue and Gold has written its name as city champion, and the sixth time in seven years South Hills has entered the final, only to be beaten.

75-YARD RUN SCORED

The winning points came in the last quarter when a desperate Westinghouse team took the ball on downs and marched 73 yards for a touchdown. In the first period Showboat Ware, punting from his own 12-yard line, found his kick blocked by Capt. Blum, of South Hills—the latter calmly picked up the ball and ran for a touchdown. The try for extra point was blocked. This did not upset the Blue and Gold, and Dye, Ware, Fields and Duxberry tore and slashed at the opposing line until Field went over for a touchdown. Dye's kick was wide.

In the third period, Westinghouse had the ball on the South Hills one-yard line, and carried the ball over twice only to be called back for penalties.

FIELD GOAL TRY FAILS

South Hills tried for a field goal on the Westinghouse 17-yard line, but Rigg's placement went wide. Then the Lakers started their march up the field, and did not stop until Ware was over the line. A forward pass was tried for the extra point, but it failed.

East Pike Run held East Washington to a 0-0 deadlock. Mapletown defeated Windridge, 13-0, and Masontown defeated Nineveh, 27-12.

It is said that the great scientist felt compunction about having involuntarily contributed to make warfare more destructive and that he conceived his plan in a spirit of counteracting the lethal effects of his inventions. season at home. The Wesleyan array will be led by Cliff Battles, a great back, who has done some tall running and scoring against N. Y. U., Navy and other foes. Art Bachtel is another invading threat.

Coach Layden, of the Dukes, will start his pony backfield, consisting of Bud Devinney at quarter, Pawlina at full and Trambley and Cristina at the halves, and his line also will be shaken up in the attempt to prevent the Wesleyan eleven from handing the locals a third straight defeat.

WELL MATCHED

Wash-Jeff, victor over Bucknell at the Stadium last Saturday and Carnegie Tech's opponent in the benefit game there next Saturday, meets West Virginia University in their annual clash at Morgantown, W. Va., with the outcome very much in doubt. Penn State, like Pitt, has an off-day, and the same is true of Grove City and Thiel.

Of particular interest is the tilt between Geneva College, fresh from its 7-0 conquest of Duquesne a week ago, and Allegheny, at Reeves Stadium. Beaver Falls. Each team has been beaten only once this fall, Allegheny by Dartmouth and Geneva by Bucknell.

PLAY FOR NEEDY

St. Vincent's plays St. Bonaventure in a benefit game at Bradford, Pa.; Davis & Elkins meets Waynesburg at Elkins, W. Va.; Bethany plays Westminster at Bethany, W. Va.; Fairmont and Potomac Teachers play at Fairmont, W. Va.; Indiana and Shippensburg Teachers hook up at Shippensburg, Pa., and Salem and West Liberty battle in a night benefit game at Wheeling, W. Va. Bellefonte Academy entertains the Temple University freshmen at Hughes Field, Bellefonte.

Coach Jock Sutherland, of Pitt, staged a workout this morning in preparation for the Penn State battle. The Panther coach faces a real problem with MacMurdo and Rip Collins, regular ends, ineligible and Mike Milligan, guard, and Daugherty, center, injured. Daily and Hirschberg are being groomed to start at the ends, Hart Morris will be called upon to fill the gap left by the loss of Milligan, and Joe Tormey is filling in for Daugherty. Josh Williams, the veteran halfback, is ailing with the grip, and may not be available for the Turkey Day game, the last of his playing career at Pitt.

The crippled condition of Pitt gives State some sort of a chance in the battle, and interest in the game as a contest is on the rise. A larger-than-usual crowd is indicated as a result.

NEW YELLOW JACKETS TO APPEAR TUESDAY

NEWCOMERS SLATED FOR LOCAL TEAM

By CARL W. SHATTO.

Although his Yellow Jackets showed greatly improved form in outplaying the league-leading Buffalo Bisons in a torrid battle here Thursday night, Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the local hockey club, refuses to call in his scouts.

REINFORCEMENTS PROMISED

Since the Pittsburgh puckmen bowed to London in the opener here on November 13, Schooley has had some gentlemen who know their hockey combing the "frozen north" for new and more experienced talent, and he promises reinforcements for the Jackets' clash with the Windsor Bulldogs here next Tuesday night.

The local club prexy refuses to divulge the names of the new Jackets or the positions at which they will appear. He prefers to guard against "false alarms" by waiting until the men are here before sounding the trumpet. It is rumored that the newcomers are experienced performers who are counted upon to provide a steadying influence, and it also is rumored that the boys now playing center are going to run into some keen competition.

SCHOOLEY SATISFIED

Although not easily satisfied, Schooley today admitted that he couldn't find much fault with the great fighting performance of his stalwarts against Buffalo. He attributes much of the locals' improvement to Duke McCurry's appearance in the lineup, and he is confident that the importation of a few more veterans will further aid the local cause. Duke's fine performance in his International League debut made it apparent that he is here to stay, and Schooley probably is correct in his assertion that bringing a few more "Dukes" here won't hurt.

WINDSOR VICTOR

WINDSOR, Ont., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—London met its second 3-2 defeat in as many days when they bowed to the Windsor Bulldogs here last night. The lineup:

London—2.		Windsor—3.
Stuart	G	Benoit

Briden	C	Robinson
Palango	L.W.	Dupuar

WEST PENN SET FOR OPENER

By JULIUS LEVIN.

Shaping up as one of the best balanced amateur leagues ever organized in this section of the state, the West Penn circuit will pry off the lid of its season Monday night when Harry Lawrence sends his South Side Falcons against the powerful Ray E. Schneiders, of the North Side, at Falcon Hall.

The Schneider roster includes, among its regulars, the cream of local college grads and the team is one of the favorites to carry off the championship. The North Siders' lineup includes Clark and Montgomery, former Muskingum stars; Emerick and Rodgers, of Geneva and Pitt, respectively, and several other lesser lights.

Floor Notes

Coach Irwin will take his Taylor Allderdice High squad to the Y. M. H. A. tonight to meet the Y. M. H. A. Reserves.

Les Cohen, star of the University of Pittsburgh varsity quintet last season, is working out with the Fintex team of the Allegheny County League.

Ward Murphy is back on the I. K. S. squad after having received a trial with Fintex.

Three Cantwell sisters will be on the Goldenson Vanities squad this winter. They are Leona, Eva and Viola.

Sport Vignettes

Watch the battle for honors between Albie Booth, Yale's ace, and Barry Wood, Harvard's quarterback, in today's annual clash between the old rival elevens .... Last year, Wood took the play away from little Albie in no uncertain fashion .... If it were not for an 8-7 defeat by Villanova in the fifth game of the season, Temple University, coached by Heine Miller, all-America end at Penn some years back, would be facing Carnegie Tech as an unbeaten eleven in their clash for the benefit of the unemployed at Franklin Field, Philadelphia, today .... Temple has beaten Thiel, St. Thomas, Bucknell, W. & J., Wake Forest, Miami and Lafayette, and the dear old Tartans will have to get a hustle on to shake off their losing streak against a team like that .... No eleven has scored more than eight points against Temple, and it has not been scored on at all in its last three games.

Remember how the Harvard-Yale games always used to be the biggest event of the football season? Well, they're meeting again today, but the eyes of the fans are focussed on the Notre-Dame-Northwestern tilt at Evanston and the Crimson-Eli scrap is just another game on the day's card. . . . Hand the palm to Western Reserve University, of Cleveland, for tough luck this season. . . . Playing the most pretentious schedule in its history, with Karl E. Davis, formerly of Pitt, in the saddle as athletic director, the so-called Wildcats got off to a bad start when Coach Gordon Locke was handicapped in his work by illness that finally caused him to give up the fight entirely after the team had been beaten by Muskingum, Pitt and Ohio University, in that order. . . . Jack Davis, freshman coach, was appointed acting head coach, and, meeting with no better success, he has been supplanted by Ray Dauber, former teammate of Locke at Iowa, the arrangement being to have Dauber get the squad ready for its final game with Case on Thanksgiving Day. . . . Dauber thus has the shortest head coach portfolio of the year, holding down the berth for only eight days.

Joe Savoldi, deposed fullback of Notre Dame, may be the new college wrestling star, to be exploited a la Wayne Munn and Gus Sonnenberg. . . . He already has received an offer from Ray Fabiani, Philadelphia promoter, who promises to make a fortune for him on the mat. . . . Savoldi weighs more than 200 pounds and has had some experience as an amateur grappler. . . . Billy Knox, veteran bowling star, of Philadelphia, who has been out of the sport for more than a year because of an injured thumb, has undergone an operation and is working out for a comeback.—HARRY KECK.

TECH-TEMPLE TEAMS CLASH

By JESS CARVER,
Staff Correspondent.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Unable to get anywhere in the football sphere themselves, Carnegie Tech's tattered Tartans hope today to put the works to one of the East's aspiring ball clubs, Temple University. Tech and Temple clash at Franklin Field this afternoon in the first of a series of two charity games. The meeting is the first in football history between the two institutions.

TEMPLE FAVORED

The consensus of opinion here seems to be that Temple will take Carnegie. Local critics are figuring that a ball club which has been booted hither and yon by Notre Dame, New York University and Pitt can't be so hot. Oh, yeah!

The Skibo war party arrived in town late last night after an uneventful ride from Pittsburgh. The squad hiked from the station to the Penn Athletic Club, where Carnegie headquarters were established.

Coach Bob Waddell and Advisory Coach Wally Steffen called the boys together after they'd checked into the club and the Judge delivered himself of a short speech.

"Just because this ball game tomorrow is to be a charity affair," the Judge rattled, "you birds don't need to develop any feeling of charity toward your fellow men, especially toward those fellow men who are going to play for Temple. There has been altogether too much charity toward the enemy on Tech's part this year. Charity may begin at home, but it don't need to continue on the ball field."

MILLER PESSIMISTIC

Temple has bowled over such elevens as Wash-Jeff, Lafayette, Wake Forest, Bucknell and Miami. Villanova ruined what the Owls thought was going to be a perfect season by upsetting the dope and winning, 8 to 7. Temple's most important triumphs were over Bucknell and Wash-Jeff, although the 46-0 win recorded at the expense of Lafayette last week on a slippery, soggy gridiron must not be discounted.

Coach Heinie Miller isn't overenthusiastic regarding his team's chances today, but he figures that his splendid backfield and a comparatively weighty line will be able to turn back challenge of the Pittsburgh Scots.

Temple will start with Capt. Jack Bonner and Gudd at the wings; Karl Klinger, who played on Pitt's freshman eleven in 1928, and Dougal will be at the tackles; Bannak and McKosky will be at the guards and either Reese or Lipske at center.

In the backfield, Leon Whittock will call signals and run the team from quarterback; the great Swede Hansen and Alex Kilhuskie are to go at the halves and Corny Bonner will do the fullbacking.

Carnegie's starting lineup will be exactly as it was the last time the Tartans went to the post. Ted Rosenzweig and Pete Flanagan will be at the ends, and the tackle jobs will be filled by John Highberger and Lenny Schnupp, in there in the stead of the injured Fletcher. Capt. John Dreshar and Hooks Sample will be at the guards and Alex Ducanis is to be over the ball. In the backfield, Stuart Dueger will be at quarterback, with Dutch Eyth and Kavel at the halves and John (Monac) Karcis at fullback.

Today's game is a charity affair, the first of two. Next week Washington State, champion of the Pacific Coast Conference, opposes Villanova in another benefit affair here.

and Southern California in its championship march.

Northwestern, already assured of at least a slice of the Western Conference championship, finds itself in a spot to advance claims to National championship honors if it can do what is considered by some experts improbable—conquer the Cyclone from South Bend.

The game will be played before a capacity crowd of 49,000 with every seat sold two weeks ago and with scalpers asking as high as $25 to $75 for a ticket.

PURPLE CHANCES SLIGHT

The experts figure that Northwestern's one chance for victory rests in the ability of the Wildcats to get the jump, put Notre Dame in the hole, and fight off the Ramblers. The general opinion is that Northwestern lacks the offensive to score more than one touchdown or at best, two, while Notre Dame figures to score at least three. The probable starting lineups:

SCOVILLE COPS TITLE

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—F. S. Scoville, of Buffalo, last night won the Eastern sectional three-cushion billiards championship by capturing the third block, 50 to 22, from Alfred De Oro, 48-year-old Brooklyn cue artist. The final standing was: Scoville 150; De Oro 116.

Fight Results

At Moose Temple—Joe Trippe defeated Jimmy Kelly, 10 rounds; Benny McArthur defeated Johnny Smackey, 6 rounds; Dan Gallagher knocked out Jack Smiler, 2 rounds; Larry Kaufman won by technical knockout over Chink George, 1 round.

CLAIRTON OPENS NEW STADIUM

Clairton High School dedicated its beautiful athletic stadium yesterday, but a Tartar from down the river in the guise of Duquesne High gridders took an edge off the ceremonies by administering to the crack home eleven the first defeat Coach Woodman's stars have tasted since 1926. The score was 7 to 0.

The only touchdown of the game was recorded by Fullback Babic in the first quarter and a moment after a forward pass was successful for the try for point. And from that moment to the finish, the fine boys tutored by Coach Parker acted like players possessed as they threw back the desperate Clairton boys.

OUT OF TITLE RACE

The defeat tossed the home team out of the W. P. I. A. L. reckoning and it recalled to all concerned that history had repeated itself in the lore of the two schools' competition. The Clairton team started on its remarkable winning streak in their last game of the 1926 season when it trimmed Duquesne at a time when the latter eleven was riding high for the sectional championship. In the interval up to yesterday, the Clairton lads won 35 games and tied two.

A fine forward pass, Babic to Cucchi, put the ball on Clairton's one-yard line before the fullback carried it over.

DEDICATE STADIUM

The dedicatory services were interesting and impressive. The biggest men of the lively town were on hand to make speeches, which were sent via loud speaker to the 5,000 fans that packed the fine new layout.

L. H. Burnett, vice president of the Carnegie Steel Company, and H. J. Davis, superintendent of the Clairton works of the Carnegie company, made two of the principal addresses.

H. D. Teal, superintendent of the Clairton schools and a baseball pitcher of much skill in his youth, gave a very fine talk on the value of athletics as a character builder. Coach Woodman's great squad was given many compliments. I. A. Nicholas, president of the Board of Education, and William M. Bryson, high school principal, also spoke. The lineup:

TRIPPE BEATS JIMMY KELLY AT MOOSE

A fighting Irish terrier, Jimmy Kelly, of the North Side and formerly of Dayton, O., fought a courageous but losing battle against the more experienced Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., in the 10-round main bout at the Moose Temple last night. He also scored two knockdowns, one for no count in the second round and another for nine in the third, but in the fifth he broke his left hand and, except for taking a few chances with it thereafter, he was a one-handed battler the remainder of the way. However, it so happened that Trippe broke his own right hand early in the battle and for this reason had to be content with winning by the decision route instead of by the knockout that always appeared imminent in view of his well-known punching prowess with that weapon.

KELLY DROPS FOE

It was a good, hard-fought bout, despite the mishaps. Trippe kept circling about the ring in his customary fashion, with Kelly crowding him and always dangerous. The first two rounds went to Kelly by good margins and Trippe, who declared afterward it was his first bout with a southpaw, was just beginning to get the range in the third, in which he had Kelly dizzy from a barrage of rights to the head, when Jimmy suddenly began to fight back and nailed his opponent with a left to the jaw that dropped him dazed in the middle of the ring for a nine count on his hands and knees. The bell rang as he arose, with accounts squared for the session.

Thereafter it was all Trippe. He had Kelly out on his feet at the end of the fourth round and was punching him about at will in the fifth before Kelly broke his hand and winced in pain. After that it was just a question of whether or not the always game and willing Kelly would be able to go the route. Possibly only the fact that Trippe fractured his best hand prevented a knockout.

Trippe weighed 147 pounds and Kelly 145.

M'ARTHUR WINS

Benny McArthur, of McKeesport, 138, closed fast in the last two rounds to nose out a decision over Johnny Smackey, of Canonsburg, 137, in the six-round semi-final, the referee voting the bout a draw, while the judges agreed on McArthur.

Knockouts ended the first two bouts in jigtime. Dan Gallagher,

NEW RECEIVER HEADED FOR PIRATE FOLD

BUC OFFICIALS TO ATTEND MEETINGS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

The annual winter baseball meetings are just around the corner, but even before these powwows begin, the Pirate family may welcome an important member. A new catcher is on the way and it is possible the deal may be swung before the local officials leave for the cold-weather meetings.

The curiosity of the home club's followers has been raised to a high pitch, inasmuch as the local officials have stated that a receiver is practically on the way. That he is a dependable maskman probably goes without saying, for Jewel Ens and Barney Dreyfuss are not expecting too much from Rolly Hemsley and Hal Finney, the only members of the staff at the present time.

Vice President Sam Dreyfuss expects to attend the minor league meeting which will be held at Montreal, the sessions to begin on December 3. From Montreal the younger Dreyfuss will journey to New York, where the National League meeting will start a few days later. The joint meeting also will be held in New York President Barney Dreyfuss and Manager Jewel Ens expects to attend this session in the metropolis.

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,

Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 66.

In previous chapters I dwelt on the eccentricities of George Edward Waddell and I think the next most colorful character I ever managed was Ossee Schreck, the Rube's battery partner.

Connie Mack.

Schreck was a wonderful catcher and the only one I ever had who could handle the Rube's blinding speed. His hands were of massive size and apparently made of steel, for he caught Waddell's fastest pitch as if it came from a boy throwing a rubber ball to him.

He was full of tricks and often delighted the spectators by gathering in swift pitches with one hand. As a receiver there were few who could rate with him. He had the mechanics of catching down perfectly.

Schreck loved to play to the crowd and he always was clowning and interpolating some buffoonery into his work behind the plate.

Waddell and Schreck gave spectators more laughs than high-salaried comedians on the stage, but, nevertheless, they never went so far with their clowning that they would lose games by it.

Schreck was irrepressible, always full of mischief and ready to go to any extreme to give the players a laugh.

Schreck came to us from Cleveland and in his first year with us we trained in New Orleans. Now in the previous year Cleveland had trained in New Orleans and stopped at the identical hotel that housed us.

In due time we reached New Orleans and the Athletics players and myself hustled to the hotel.

I went back of the clerk's desk to help the proprietor assign rooms.

While I was checking off the list of names, the hotel owner suddenly stopped, raised both hands, looked at the entrance and muttered something.

Schreck had just crossed the threshold.

"Look here, Mr. Mack, I can't take your club if that guy belongs to you," he cried, pointing at Schreck, who put on an innocent expression for the occasion.

PACIFIES HOTELMAN

It was Schreck's first year with me and I knew scarcely anything about his personal ways. I knew he was a good catcher and expected him to be a big help to my team, so I raised my voice in protest and told the proprietor quite sharply that all of my men were gentlemen and never gave any trouble to the best of the hotels and that I personally would be responsible for Schreck's conduct during his stay at the hotel.

My voice carried so much passion that the owner cooled off and replied:

"Well, I am not so sure all of your men this year are gentlemen, but, if you keep that fellow from doing what he did with the Cleveland club last spring, I'll take one more chance with him, but out he goes if he starts anything in this hotel again."

I was too busy at the time to question the owner any more about what Schreck had done, but I learned the story from Ossee's own lips the next night.

It seemed that the year before the Cleveland players had complained about the quality of the steaks served and often they would send them back. As the second order was no better, they thought the same piece of meat had been returned to them.

BATTLE OVER STEAKS

One night, Schreck came to a table a little late and one of the Cleveland players told him that he had just sent his steak back, but had made an odd cut at the end with his knife so he could identify it if it came to him again.

In a minute or two, the Negro waiter brought a steak to this player, who examined it and explained:

"It's not the one I sent back. I'll take a chance on this."

Schreck then ordered a steak and when it came the player next to him looked at it, found the identifying cut, and with a laugh, cried:

"What, thats' the very one I sent back 20 minutes ago."

Schreck excused himself, and five minutes later came back with a hammer and nail. Picking the steak out of the plate with his hands, he placed it against the wall and nailed it firmly there, to the consternation of other guests and the head waiter.

In the early days of the American League, no Sunday games were played in Detroit. We were playing a series in Detroit, and it was arranged that a Sunday championship game would be played by the Athletics and Tigers in Toledo, O., a short distance away.

PRANK ON TRAIN

The players of both teams boarded a train in Detroit on Sunday morning for the short ride to Toledo. On walking to the train, one of our players picked up a coupling pin, and, putting it between the folds of his newspaper, carried it into our car.

This wag spotted Schreck's grip, and, when the catcher walked to the front of the car to join a card game, he slyly slipped the coupling pin into his grip.

On arrival in Toledo, Schreck grabbed his grip and soon found it was heavier than it ought to be. Opening it up, he fished out the coupling pin and threw it to the side.

"That's a fine trick, putting a dirty coupling pin among a lot of clean shirts and collars," he protested in disgust.

"Let's see what you have in the grip," chorused several players who clustered around him.

On examination, they found that Schreck's grip contained an empty cigar box and one soiled collar and nothing else.

tackle and guard, with Ed Schultz, an extra end, and Anton Ciper, reserve tackle. Unless they earn reinstatement, Jim MacMurdo and Paul Collins, erstwhile regular ends, also will be lost through a continuance of their suspension.

Benny Friedman

"THERE WERE FOUR Jewish boys on the Michigan team in 1926," relates Benny Friedman, now manager of the New York Giant pros, "so we got together with the rest of the team on a so-called talking play. I'd give the signals, say '86-37-54', and then add "rechte seit, linke seit,' which, translated, means right side, left side. It served to confuse the opposition, and while they were wondering what was coming off the ball would be snapped and we'd gain a few yards. It never failed in a pinch—until we met Ohio State. We were in a tight spot, and I called 'rechte seit, linke seit.' The ball was snapped. No gain. There was a big pile-up and we lost the ball on downs. Later we tried it again at a crucial moment. A pile-up again and no gain. And a smiling face came out of the pile-up. It was that of Shan Klein, Jewish center of Ohio State. He caught the enlightened expression on my face and said, 'Es will dir garnichts helfen,' which means, 'It won't help you any.' So we didn't try that play any more that day."

NIGHT BASEBALL GETS no boost from Johnny Tobin, former star outfielder of the St. Louis Feds, and of the Browns, Senators and Red Sox in the American League. Tobin last summer was appointed manager of the Bloomington club in the Three-I League, which played night ball.

"I am not crazy about playing ball under electric lights," Tobin said. "I really think it is hard on a player's eyes, and I mean that, instead of lasting for about 10 years, a man who plays ball at night will be lucky to spend half that time on the diamond."

FEW HIGH SCHOOL football teams in the country have ever made as remarkable a record as that rolled up by Clairton High until it was interrupted yesterday by a 7-to-0 defeat at the hands of Duquesne High. That was Clairton's first reverse in four consecutive seasons and starting with the final game on the 1926 schedule won 35 games and tied two before it was doomed. One of the ties was played with Scott High this year and the other with Donora High in 1928.

The 35 victories were achieved over 17 high school rivals—four each over Duquesne, Homestead, Monongahela and Elizabeth, three over McKeesport, two each over Scott, Donora, Munhall and Glassport, and one each over Verona, Mars, Swissvale, California, Turtle Creek, Hurst, Greensburg and Charleroi. In four seasons up to date Clairton has scored 669 points against only 56 for their opponents, and has been scored on in only nine games out of 37. And it is not only on the playing field that the boys so ably coached by George Woodman and William Wyke have reflected credit upon their school, their city and their mentors, for during all the making of that great record not one member of the squad was ever suspended for a minute for being back in his studies. Clairton certainly holds a proud place on the scholastic football map.

George Earnshaw

DURING A BANQUET speech in Philadelphia recently, Connie Mack said that at least eight of the Athletics of 1930 could be members of the club again in 1931 "if they wanted to be." It develops now that he was referring to the salary question, believing that the demands of some of the stars were altogether too high and taking this means of notifying them that they would have to come down in their figures if they wished to remain with the White Elephants. It is said that George Earnshaw, pitching hero of the World Series, asked for a salary of $30,000 for next season. After a talk with Mack he sliced $5,000 off this figure, according to report, but Connie insists that he do considerable more slicing. With Lefty Grove expecting from $20,000 to $25,000 and Al Simmons and Mickey Cochrane looking for not much less, owners of the A's are reported to be groggy already. The winning of pennants and world championships always means big jumps in the payroll.

EVEN FOOTBALL, WITH all its upsets, has not been able to keep pace with the boxing game for results far out of line with the dope. It may be concluded that form held true when Tommy Loughran got the decision over King Levinsky in Chicago last night, though at that there were many who figured Loughran would, like Jimmy Slattery, be used as build-up for Levinsky, but there was little in the form sheets to indicate that Billy Petrolle, with weight and speed against him, would be able to win the award over the sensational Jimmy McLarnin. His punching power gave him a knockout chance, of course, but a decision appeared almost out of the question.

It seems to be all the style in New York for short-enders to step in and upset the dope. This is the fourth spill in a row there, following Al Singer's victory over Sammy Mandell, Fidel LaBarba's win over Kid Chocolate and Tony Canzoneri's overthrow of Singer. A couple of others were contributed elsewhere meanwhile when Young Jack Thompson beat Jackie Fields and Thompson in turn was defeated by Tommy Freeman. It sure is a year of fistic surprise parties.

The latest New York upset puts McLarnin back a few pegs as a welterweight title contender, when he had looked to be an uncrowned champion, and it brings Petrolle right up again as a lightweight championship possibility if he can still make the poundage.

Only a few months ago Petrolle handed a pasting to Tony Canzoneri, the present champion, he is the only man in the world who ever knocked out Jack (Kid) Berg, and by besting Mandell and others he has given plenty of evidence that he has a world of class and ring power when right. He deserves a lot of crdit for a great comeback when he was thought to be pretty well washed up.

PETROLLE TOPS M'LARNIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Billy Petrolle, of North Dakota, turned in the ultimate in surprises last night by hammering Jimmy McLarnin, clouting Celt into one of the worst defeats of the Irishman's spectacular career.

A crowd of 12,500, banner throng in these days of unemployment, bounced around in their seats in vociferous amazement as Petrolle, relentless as a maddened bull pup, smashed the class of the welterweights about the ring for 10 full rounds, dumped him in the resin twice for counts of nine in the fourth session, and ran away fresh and eager with the unanimous decision at the end of the battle.

LOUGHRAN VICTOR

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia wizard, completely subdued the heavy-swinging King Levinsky, the former fish peddler, in their 10-round bout in the Chicago Stadium last night.

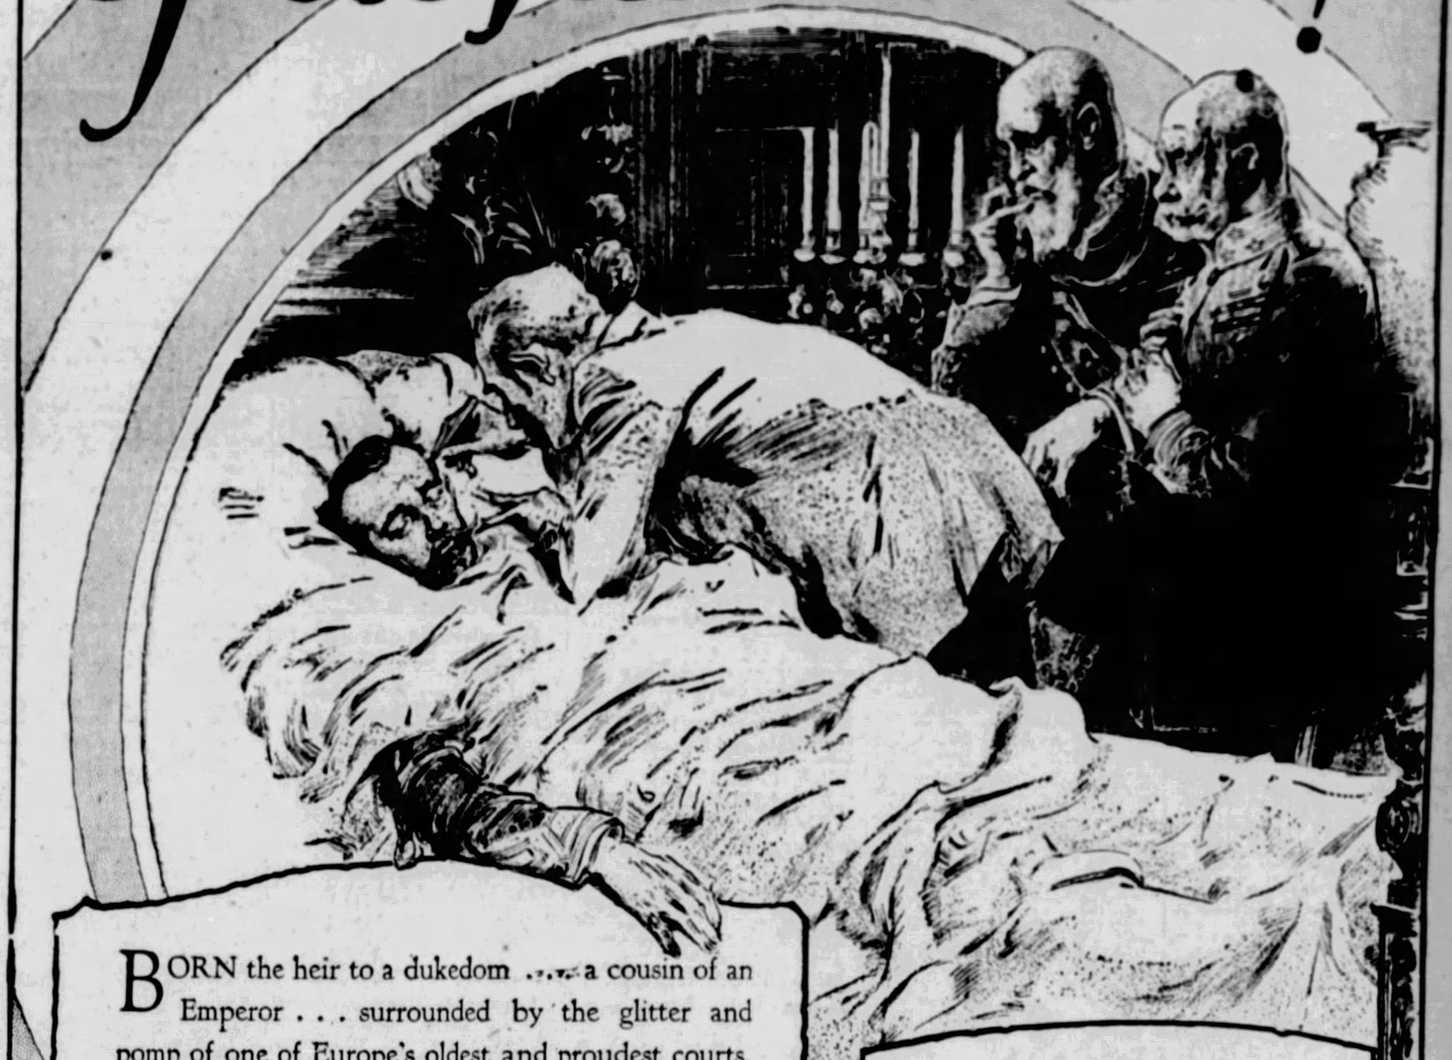
"I'll Expose the Secrets of Royal Families!"



BORN the heir to a dukedom . . . a cousin of an Emperor . . . surrounded by the glitter and pomp of one of Europe's oldest and proudest courts, hobnobbing with Kings and Emperors . . . followed by admiring crowds, tenderly guarded by the police and pursued by beautiful women. But he could not tolerate the intrigues, bitter jealousies and hatreds—the wild gaiety and human passions—the hypocrisy of court life. This high-born man prefers to live the life of a commoner in Switzerland. And now he reveals the misery of court life—the curse of a throne which breathed death and destruction to every one approaching it . . . intimate details of the death of a Crown Prince in a hunting lodge . . . illuminating revelations behind the scenes in the life of European royal families: Sunday in The American Weekly.

Are We Really Civilized?

Is it so that we are dirtier than savages, noisier than wild men? Is it true that while reaching for higher and nobler things we are missing the ordinary comfort, cleanliness, health and peace of mind of the dumb animals? This is something that concerns every man, woman and child in America . . . a startling array of facts regarding the air we breathe, the food we eat, the clothes we wear, the life we lead and the penalties we pay for trying to be civilized: next Sunday in The American Weekly.

A Strange Marital Mix-up

Plain, homely husbands, with only one wife, have spent sleepless nights devising ways of squaring things with that wife when she caught some other woman showing an interest in him. But here is a man, married four times, divorced and is about to marry for the fifth time—and the wives are good friends, play golf together and "compare notes." Not only that—wife number three undertook to finance her husband so he could pay alimony to wife number two. Though the ladies love him and leave him, there is always an impatient line of beauties waiting their turn. You will be interested in the details of this strange marital mix-up: next Sunday in The American Weekly.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Around the Bend

Two men huddled over a tiny fire on the wooded banks of a wild and desolate river. Each was thin almost to emaciation, each was clothed in garments so patched and mended it was a wonder they still held together, and each was unkempt with a beard of many weeks' growth.

"Let's turn back tomorrow!" pleaded Justin, younger by ten years than his companion. "If we go on, we're dead men."

"Not if we hit the Bighole River," retorted Anderson. "Then it's a straight paddle to the Post."

"If we hit the Bighole!" mocked Justin. "Your eternal 'ifs' make me sick. I want to get home. Home!" He stared out into the gloom of the falling twilight with sunken, homesick eyes.

Anderson threw more wood on the fire. "I've a hunch," he said gently, "that tomorrow—"

But Justin turned on him savagely. "It's your everlasting hunches that have landed us in this mess. If you hadn't had a hunch about this trip to begin with, Joan Stewart would never have made marrying me contingent on my going with you. Yes, that's what it amounted to. With her father an explorer, it comes natural to her to think other men would like the life. And Joan always wanted me to prove that, in spite of my confounded money, I could do something worthwhile. But I'm through!" He rose and stalked away into the forest.

Impossible to Return

Justin, poor lad, had been homesick almost from the beginning but had, until tonight, kept gamely on the job without a whimper. Anderson would have been ready enough to shelve his own desire to keep going had they not come much too far not to proceed. A retracing of their journey with winter close at hand and provisions woefully scant meant certain death.

Somehow he must instill into Justin the will to advance. And because love for Joan was responsible for his yearning to return, Anderson had to use that love as a scourge to drive him ahead.

"See here, old man," he began the next morning, "you can take my word for it that we'll never live to see home on what stuff we've got and the few miserable little trout and fishhawks we can catch if we turn back. And, supposing even the impossible, do you think Joan would love you any the better for quitting right at the moment when success is at hand?"

Anderson Worries

"Success?" questioned Justin. "If we go on and accomplish what we set out to do, you'll be a sort of hero in her eyes. You laugh at my hunches, but I have a queer feeling inside of me that by tomorrow night something big will have happened. We'll have brought down a caribou or spotted the Bighole."

"What it would mean," exclaimed Justin, "to see that confounded river! Nothing more wonderful could happen! All right. Let's push on."

The two men had already been traveling for 18 months with equipment and provisions planned for less than a year. The previous winter had closed in early and, instead of reaching their goal and getting out to civilization, they had been forced to spend it in a squalid Red Dog Indian village, paying for slabs of jerked caribou with some of their precious tobacco.

Anderson sometimes worried for fear this girl that Justin loved might have given him up for lost or dead. Yet he reflected reasonably that explorers' daughters must be used to delays and weeks of waiting without news.

All the morning they followed a narrow, winding stream which brought them to a small lake and series of tedious portages. At noon Justin climbed hopefully to a tiny knoff only to return with downcast countenance and the report that nothing was to be seen but the same old network of weedy lakes with which they were already too familiar.

Was it possible they had followed some wrong stream far back in the beginning? Were the Indian tales of the location of the upper Bighole River unreliable? In either case, the word "finis" might as well be written then and there to their trip—and almost sure to their lives as well.

Late that afternoon they had pulled into shore and were unloading duffle when Justin grabbed Anderson's arm with thin, eager fingers. "Smoke!" he farly shouted. "Indians! They'll know about the river and let us have some meat!"

Sure enough, above the stunted treetops on the next point a thin column of smoke spiralled into the air.

Too impatient to repack their stuff, they leaped into the canoe and pushed off.

A Good Hunch

Around the bend they did indeed find an encampment. But not of Indians. Anderson was puzzled. The balloon silk tents and Peterborough canoes belonged to no trapper's outfit, yet what would white men be doing entering the wilderness at this end at this time of year?

Suddenly a slim figure came to the doorway of one of the tents, then flung both arms wildly into the air, and dashed pell-mell to the river's edge.

Justin laid his paddle across the bow in front of him with a trembling hand. "I must be dreaming," he murmured. "I must be dreaming, because that is Joan Stewart!"

An hour later Joan was still explaining exultantly. When you didn't get through before winter, I figured you'd push on again in the spring but I knew you must be getting mighty low on provisions. I sent a wire to Dad in Pekin—he was due out of the Gobi desert—took some money my grandfather left me, hired one of Dad's old Canadian guides and his brother, and planned to work in from this end, feeling sure I would meet you. You see," she said, "I sort of owed it to Justin. He went for my sake—something foolish I said—and if anything had ever happened to him—" she winked a tear drop away. "We left the Bighole yesterday."

Justin turned to Anderson. "You sure had a hunch!" he said.

Anderson grinned. "It turned out bigger than I had any right to expect!"

CONGRESSMAN FRISBY OFFERS TO MAKE SUPREME SACRIFICE FOR HIS COUNTRY

WASHINGTON—Dashing hurriedly past the post office on his way to dry up one or more of the Capital's most flagrant speakeasies, Congressman Frisby only paused long enough to issue the following statement in regard to farm relief.

"I have been told the farmers of the nation have too much wheat. Wheat is a good thing; but too much of a good thing is bad. However, if my fellow agriculturists will donate half of this oversupply to the FRISBY FAMINE FUND, I will be only too glad to straighten out the whole matter. That is to say: The farmers, designated by 'A' for the sake of brevity, will turn over the unknown quantity 'X' (half of the wheat crop) to 'F,' whom we will call Frisby. I will then preserve this cereal supply in some cool, dry place until a time when Hunger stalks abroad in the land. Of course, while this is going on the price of wheat will rise and the farmers will be able to sell out at a neat profit."

Act on Subway Now!

Other Local Matters Briefly Discussed.

The statement of F. R. Phillips, president of the Pittsburgh Railways Company, that the company is willing to run its trolley cars in the proposed downtown subway, and to pay as rental whatever amount may be saved by removing the cars from the streets, should pave the way for prompt action on the project. It is to be hoped that work can be started soon, and, if the proper co-operation is given, it can be. The money was voted by the people years ago, the surveys have been made, and preliminary studies completed.

President Phillips is none too enthusiastic in his statement on the subway project. It is for the City Transit Commission to say, he declares, what benefit would accrue to the public from the building of a subway. There is no secret about it. One does not have to be a seer to perceive what an advantage it would be, as a method of relieving traffic congestion, to get street cars off of some of the downtown streets. Nor is it necessary to consult the Transit Commission to perceive that street cars operated in the subway could be run much more rapidly than on the surface and that the ride from the business district to the residential sections could accordingly be shortened, in time, very appreciably.

But it is not necessary at this late day to argue the merit or lack of merit of the subway plan. That was settled in 1919, when the taxpayers voted to issue $6,000,000 of bonds to pay for the project. If it was needed 11 years ago, it is needed to a far greater extent now. It is needed now, by the way, not only to relieve congestion and promote rapid transit but also to provide jobs for some of Pittsburgh's unemployed workmen.

The zeal for stream purification that is being shown by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce is one of the most encouraging things that has occurred in the long fight to protect Pennsylvania's rivers and creeks from pollution. It is especially encouraging because the Chamber represents to a considerable extent the manufacturing and mining interests that have been responsible for most of the contamination. With these men themselves awakening to the economic and esthetic loss that results from defilement of our streams there is hope for improvement.

Magistrate Rothenberg held lottery agents for court yesterday, while Magistrate Papale fined those arraigned in his court. The day before Rothenberg let the defendants in similar cases off with a fine. There ought to be some consistency about the way these cases are handled. If the magistrates are interested in dealing with such cases in a legal way, they should hold the defendants for the grand jury.

Pittsburghers will be glad to hear of the fresh honors that have been won by John Kane, the Strip house painter who has had his pictures exhibited in the Carnegie Institute International for several successive years. Some of his canvases have been chosen for display in important shows in New York and Washington. Kane is self-taught; so his success should be encouraging to other persons who aspire to become artists but cannot pay for instruction. Kane has proved that it is unnecessary to study in Paris or Rome to achieve distinction.

The Department of Public Instruction has just issued an interesting report on the development of kindergartens in our public school system. Kindergartens were introduced into Pennsylvania, the department says, by Germans years ago. Which brings to mind the super-patriot who demanded, during the war, that the word "kindergarten" be eschewed as something unclean, because of its German origin. Now that they have recovered from their hysteria it would be interesting to know what the super-patriots of this type think of the excesses that they committed.

"To err is human." This is probably the best ex- planation for the lapse of City Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt, whose friendly wave of the hand to a juror acquaintance in a case on trial in Common Pleas Court led to the abrupt stopping of the trial and discharge of the jury by order of Judge F. P. Patterson.

The interest that the nationally circulated maga- zines are taking in Pittsburgh is rather puzzling. Another article about the city will appear in the December issue of one of the high-class periodicals. This one, in refreshing contrast with those that have preceded it during the last few months, is complimentary in character. Pittsburghers will swell with pride as they read it. The writer, however, applies one adjective to the town that is likely to cause a smile. He says Pittsburgh is a "gentle" city—Pittsburgh, the city of steel, and blazing furnaces, and mighty power, once described because of the infernal appearance of its mills at night as "hell with the lid off!"

The Sun-Telegraph has received from a coal mine foreman a letter in which, commenting on the recent mine disaster in Ohio, he says the coal operators, because of poor earnings, are unable to spend as much money for safety as is desirable. The answer to that is that they should not attempt to operate if they have left anything undone that is necessary for the protection of the miners. Human life and dividends are not to be weighed in the same balance.

It is to be hoped the prediction that Senator David A. Reed will choose a postmaster for Pittsburgh when he visits the city next week will be fulfilled. Senator Reed has had many months in which to make a recommendation, and the excuses offered for his failure to act are beginning to sound rather hollow. He has had plenty of time to find a good man, and if it is desirable that Pittsburgh should have a postmaster at all it is desirable that it should have one now.

The dentists' convention in Pittsburgh this week has given many of the citizens something important to think about— the care of the teeth. More importance is attached to the subject now than in former years because of the discovery of a connection between diseased teeth and various ailments that one would not suspect of being related in any way to defects in the molars, Pittsburghers are fortunate in having at their service some of the country's most skilled dentists. The dental department of the University of Pittsburgh has given the city a commanding position in dental education.

"Bugs" Baer Says:

A Million in It

Essence of statistics show there are 1,000,000 citizens engaged in the beer racket.

They're the busiest unemployed people you ever tossed a blurred eye upon.

The law says there is no beer. And after you have tasted it you must admit the law is right.

But there are more substitutes than there are imitators of Ripley.

In the old days we admit that the stuff would put a coat on your tongue. Now the boys want three coats and a waterproof finish. The result is petrified tonsils, simonized palates and enameled adenoids.

Ordinary stuff means nothing. It's getting so that a man sings the Stein Song with a mug of cyanide of potassium in his hand.

Compared with the smouldering brew they now put in bottles we want to state that Big Bertha threw nothing but loving cups at Paris.

It should be brewed in cyclone cellars, bottled in stormproof doors and inhaled in a padded telephone booth.

When the law says there are a million citizens engaged in the beer racket it is a plain statement of facts like a yell from a dentist's office.

But the estimate of malt technicians is too conservative. It must be an old census.

There are more than that now. Every day a few thousand more citizens announce their engagement to the suds industry.

Beer used to ruin many careers.

Now it is a career.

Once upon a time there was the good old temperate American who could take it or leave it.

He's now doing both. He's taking it from Canada and leaving it on your back porch.

It is amazing how an otherwise respectable homesteader will wade through 18 amendments to take a whack at the Constitution.

We don't know the cause of it. But it is probably a theory that hasn't met Einstein yet.

PATIENT GENIUS

By Archibald Henderson

The indefatigable labors of an Austrian biographer have recently supplied us with interesting data regarding that patient and ignored genius who discovered the mathematical principle of heredity. Although overlooked in his lifetime, Gregor Johann Mendel had supreme faith in the value and far-reaching import of his discoveries. It is with genuine sadness that we recall his words: "My day yet will come!"

Mendel never married. He entered the Augustinian monastery of St. Thomas at Bruenn at the age of 21. To some visitors, to whom he proudly showed the plants in his monastery garden, he remarked, "Here are my children."

The task to which he applied himself was almost unbelievably difficult and laborious—the study of the origin and evolution of organic forms. In reporting on his classic experiments, Mendel observed: "It required indeed some courage to undertake a labor of such far-reaching extent, this appears, however, to be the only right way by which we can finally reach the solution of a question the importance of which cannot be overestimated in connection with the history of the evolution of organic forms."

It does not seem to be generally known that Mendel was in the habit of keeping mice in his room and breeding them for sport. He was interested particularly in crossing different races of mice, such as white and gray.

His studies in this field, rather than with plants, it is now believed, gave him his first inkling of the famous law which bears his name.

The racial character of whiteness, disappearing in the second generation and apparently lost for good, would pop up again in the third generation. This phenomenon led Mendel to the belief that such an hereditary character is never really lost, but merely remains latent for a time.

This reappearance of an ancestral trait in a third generation had long been known, being alluded to, for example, by Bacon in one of his essays. Mendel differed from his predecessors in forming a definite hypothesis, which he endeavored to prove true by numerous experiments.

Mendel conceived the hypothesis that if we trace out unit characters we shall find them conserved; and that if they skip generations, there is some law that regulates the skipping or latency of a character.

Nothing in scientific history is more astounding than the stupidity, blindness or malignancy of the scientists of that day. Mendel made experiments on 10,000 plants; and sent a report of his published discoveries to the leading German authority in that field, one Carl von Naegeli.

This stupid or jealous fellow, it is hard to say which, wrote back to Mendel, "It seems to me that the experiments with the peas should not be regarded as concluded, but should first be rightly begun." For colossal fatuity, this observation stands perhaps unrivaled in the history of science.

It has been a matter of considerable conjecture as to why Mendel's epochal contribution on the study of the peas passed unnoticed. In his work, "The Adventure of Science," Ginzburg says: "The reason for the neglect of Mendel's paper is directly traceable to the change of scientific ideas introduced by the dominance of Darwin's thesis of natural selection. The work of the experimentalists, which (with the exception of Mendel's experiments) had been practically fruitless, was now altogether abandoned. And this for two reasons: The prime motive for investigating the results of hybridization had been to elucidate the problem of the origin of species."

But now Darwin had given a plausible explanation of the mechanism of evolution. As Bateson puts it, what should have been hailed as a long-expected beginning was taken for the completed work. A second and more important reason was that Darwin had taken as the basis for his theory the natural existence of small variations. These variations did not need to be accounted for; they were assumed in the premises.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I'm blue today. Memories . . . Ever see a couple of mangy coyotes skulking some crippled beast? Ever see a sun-gnawed skull on a desert trail? That's what memories are doing to me today. That's how hollow my heart is.

Well, there's nothing new in that. Everyone gets that way. What can you do about it? Pretty words? Phewy! I could spit them through my teeth, on a day like this. Live for others? Huh! What do others mean to me, feeling as I do now? I tell you I'm sick of others, sick of myself, sick of life. Everything's the bunk and there's no cure for it. If only one didn't have to remember—

And yet—there are some memories—

Why am I thinking of that kid I once saw, breaking a bronc, up on the Mother Lode. A sandy haired, cross-eyed, gangling kid of 18. Being half starved and totally broke, his ribs were slats and his pants were rags. Not giving a damn, his grin was hitched from ear to ear. And through all that ensued, which was plenty and pronto, that grin stayed hitched.

If ever a horse was filled with hell, it was that cayuse. And what he did to himself and that brat, was nobody's business! Instant the kid lit on him . . instant he felt human heel on his wild hide . . . WHAM, HE WENT TO IT!

Stiffened first—ears flat, nostrils spread, then off—murder mad—around the corral.

Side wise! End wise! Sunfishing from under—
Bellying up, till he slanted on air!
Back again, bucking—side winding, lashing.

Round in a whirlwind of heave—kick-n'-squeal!
Suddenly he huddled—his mad eyes grew crafty,
Spine humped in an arc, legs braced, stiff as rods—
Then straight up he shot—as straight as a rocket—
And down, hoofs together—GOD SAVE THAT KID'S SKULL!
But the kid only grinned!
"Hang on, youngster!" we shouted—
"Hang on there and ride!
"RIDE 'ER, COWBOY—SIT TIGHT!"
Our yell was half sob—the horse screamed in answer.
Flung himself at the gate, and we heard a knee crunch—
But the kid still held on—
Then, raving with madness,
That black devil reared—
TURNED A SOMERSAULT FLAT!
But when he crawled up and began counting pieces,
There, tight as a wood-tick, the youngster still—SAT!
His eyes were wiped blank—his flesh was gray putty,
The blood guttered down from his nose to his chin,
Yet he sat that hell through because sticking and sitting
WERE A HE-MAN'S ONE BUSINESS
WHEN BREAKING A BRONC.
No matter what happened—
If his skull split in splinters,
If his features were scrambled
IT WAS UP TO A COWBOY TO HANG ON AND SIT.
So he sat.

I'm blue today. Everything a mess. Everything going wrong. I can't say pretty words. And noble sentiments give me a pain in the neck. BUT, I CAN SIT!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Keeper of the Light

Below me shriek the mighty waves
Whose roar resounds across the night
And beats against heaven's architraves,
For I am keeper of the light.

Within the rock-walled lighthouse tower,
Far, far above the raging tide,
Alone from dusk till dawn's pale flower,
I tend the beacon flashing wide.

With only winds and stars for friends
Deep joy is in my nightly task,
Thanksgiving from my heart ascends,
No greater happiness I ask.

The tides below me ebb and flow,
The seagulls scream, gales vex the night,
And every voice that calls I know
For I am keeper of the light.

All undisturbed by winds or waves
In tumult of tempestous flight,
I know the light can guide, can save;
My trust is in the light, the light!

Wears Her Whole Fortune

Copper and Iron, Precious as Gold.

AN AFRICAN BEAUTY WEARING HER FORTUNE AROUND HER NECK AND ON HER ARMS.

Young ladies yearning for a pearl necklace, a diamond tiarra and if possible a large diamond "marquise" ring, to show that they are engaged to a "live one," will smile at this dark skinned beauty from warm Africa.

But they need NOT smile. She wears her necklaces and bracelets made of iron and copper, her whole fortune represented in her supply of what we call "the baser metals."

Iron and copper are not base in Africa. A small piece of iron may be worth more to an African than piles of gold to a rich American.

For instance, a small piece of iron made into a sharp point, attached to the end of a stick, in the hands of a brave man will keep off a lion, the king of beasts being a coward and not liking the feel of cold steel.

You may see in Africa sturdy boys in their teens, watching and protecting herds of cattle, on the lookout for lions, their only weapon a sharp piece of iron fastened to a long stick.

Also when this African young lady appears "in society" with hoops of iron and copper around her neck, and bands of iron around her arms, wrists and ankles, she knows that she is enticing because of her wealth as well as her beauty.

Everything is comparative. A sharp flint was as important to your ancestor of 500,000 years ago as a high-powered automobile is to you NOW.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Purely personal piffle: Only one telephone number, Columbus 7300, a magazine office, sticks in my memory. Twice a year a stranger sends me a lead pencil on which my name is lettered in silver. I like to write the name "Sandusky." A huge scar on my ankle is from the bite of a pet raccoon.

My father once owned the largest St. Bernard dog in the world. I have not been in a barber shop for eight years. Many readers think I am a fat old man. I often lose track of a play reading the programs. Leon Gordon is my favorite portrait painter. I sometimes leave my hose inside out on the dressing table.

The hour between 4 and 5 p. m. always lags. I do not look at my daily mail until in bed at night. I frequently fool around two hours before breakfast. But my wife never fails to drop what she is doing and sit with me while I eat. I usually awaken at dawn to worry about something that never happens.

I can snap out of many fits of blues by reading the Bible. I have always wanted to live for awhile above a store in the crowded Ghetto. I am evasive and indulge minor duplicities, but rarely lie about anything important. Every knock about me in print has been by writers I do not know.

My dogs, Rainbow and Billy, are tolerant, but not pals. George M. Cohan strikes me as the squarest guy I ever met in the theatrical world. The late George Randolph Chester bought the first newspaper story I ever sold. Ray Long the first magazine article. My eyes are brown. My voice deep.

Mosquito bites leave a welt, but never bother me. I am in occasional correspondence with about 30 extremely old ladies in various parts of the country. I drop a line of some sort to my sister every day. I like a lapel flower but feel a sis wearing one.

I don't believe one-third the stories of losses in the market crash. America after years of prosperity suddenly decided it was oopsie-daisey to plead poverty. The most important economic problem of this country is to give a square deal, so long denied, to farmers. I seldom laugh out loud.

I believe wise cracking has become suddenly obnoxious to thousands who used to eat it up. I am timid about asking my own bank to cash a check. My night table is never without candy. I know of no job that appeals like my own. Yet I am always figuring a way to do something else. I never had a headache in my life.

I am a gravy sopper when no one is looking. I would like to see a whole show of Phil Bakers, William Gaxtons and Frank Fays. I had two dinners with as likable a fellow as I ever met before I knew he was a famous gang killer. And a drug addict. In my opinion the theater has become too arty, allegorical, poetical, symbolical—and smutty.

For years I did not like Elsie Janis although admiring her art. We met, became friends and she is one of the dandiest girls I know. I have had innumerable such experiences. Nothing is so tricky as snap judgment. I like to sharpen pencils.

Much of my life was a series of regrets until I cut out social drinking. Broadway in electric lights still gives me a thrill after more than 20 years. I am able to relax more in Paris than any other city. And I think because the phone seldom rings there. When strangers come to town I often take them by traffic cops I know so I can wave familiarly and show off. I wear out my left shoe first.

I continue to pronounce Italian Eye-talian, walk pie-footed and shudder when passing prisons. One of the most courageous women I know is Nellie Revell. About 100 dogs are named for me including one of Albert Payson Terhune's prize collies. Chicago has a stimulating effect and for some reason I like the train ride through Kansas. I feel as safe in Chinatown or on the Bowery after dark as on Fifth avenue in broad daylight. Twice in trans-Atlantic storms I firmly believed the end had come. And here is the end of the page.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

For years, your family has sent out and received showers of Christmas cards. The list has mounted to such proportions that you feel you cannot spend so much in such a trivial way.

You have looked over last year's list and have decided that many who remembered you did so because they got your card first.

So you have decided to cut down the list and await developments.

You have done this before and then cards began to come from those who had never sent you a card before.

Soon you were madly buying and addressing cheerful good wishes as in the past.

The real spirit of Christmas seemed to get you, and you threw your resolutions to the winds and sent to your friends, regardless of whether they ever remembered you or not.

You bought more cards, thought more good wishes and jolly well enjoyed writing down the names and addresses of those whose lives had touched your in the past.

It was a good feeling and when it was all over you had smiled with a goodly lot of old friends, and it was mutual, at least the flow of cards was so broad in scope it seemed mutual and the world was a happier place to you.
